American Academy of Political and Social Science. Electric railway transportation. Phil., Am. Acad. Pol. Sci., '11. (Ja28) 5+ 244 p. Q. (Annals.) pap., $1.

Bianchi, Martha Gilbert Dickinson.

A Cossack lover. N. Y., Duffield, '11. (Ja28) c. 363 p. D. $1.30 n.

By the author of "Within the hedge," "Russian lyrics and Cossack songs," etc. An American girl living with relatives in England decides to go with a Russian friend to the Far East when the Japanese-Russian war breaks out. In Russia she meets the friend's brother, a Cossack officer, and they fall madly in love with each other and are betrothed. The mercenary English relatives manage to part them and a year of suffering and misunderstanding follow. All ends well, though the Cossack is an exile from Russia forever.

Brandane, J:

My lady of Aros. N. Y., Duffield, '11. (Ja28) 318 p. front. map, D. $1.20 n.

A novel by a new writer that has met with favorable criticism in England. It is a story of the Isle of Aros near Mull in 1759, when Jacobite plots and spies made life in the Highlands full of excitement. A young surgeon in the navy comes to the isle to help a wounded man and immediately finds himself involved with the king's spies. Morag MacLean is the lady of Aros and Fraser, the surgeon, falls in love with her and then becomes the enemy of her brother. There are thrilling adventures, escapes and captures in plenty.

Braun, F: A:

Margaret Fuller and Goethe; the development of a remarkable personality; her religion and philosophy, and her relation to Emerson, J. F. Clarke, and transcendentalism. N. Y., Holt, '10, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '10. 271 p. (3 p. bibl.) D. $1.35 n.

This book is a centenary tribute to Margaret Fuller's memory, she having been born in 1810. The chief aim of the book is to trace the inner development of the powerful personality of the woman, and to search out the sources of her growth and the foundations for her religious convictions and conceptions of life. Goethe was the author of these convictions which she disseminated among her countrymen and her method of interpreting and defending his work is also treated of.

Brooklyn Daily Eagle almanac, 1911; a book of information, general of the world, and special of New York City and Long Island. Brooklyn, N. Y., Brooklyn Daily Eagle, '11. (Ja28) c. 570 p. fold. maps in pocket, O. 50 c.

Buchan, J:

The great diamond pipe. N. Y., Dodd, Mead, '11. (Ja28) c. '10. 8+309 p. front. D. $1.20 n.

A pipe is a mining term for a body or elongated vein of ore and the diamond pipe in question was situated in South Africa, where David Crawfurd, a young Scotchman, had gone as a storekeeper. No sooner had the lad reached his place of business than he discovered that illicit diamond buyers, or I. D. B's., as they are called, were operating in the region. But this was a minor matter compared to the Kaffir uprising led by an educated black who claims descent from Prester John. The book is full of adventures, wild rides by night, daring climbs, and narrow escapes, all told in the words of David, who won Prester John's treasure in the end.

Burke, Sir Bernard, and Ashworth, P.

A genealogical and heraldic history of the peerage and baronetage, the privy council, knightage and companionage. 73d ed. N. Y., Putnam, '11. (Ja28) 188+ 2636 p. il. Q. $12.

Campbell, Gilbert Lewis.

Industrial accidents and their compensation. Bost., Houghton Mifflin, '11. (Ja28) c. 12+105 p. O. (Hart, Schaffner and Marx prize economic essays.) $1 n.

A brief and careful study of the problems presented by the many accidents which occur in the various industries throughout the country. Wrecked homes and dependent classes are the results, and the legal procedure works such injustice to the worker, in most cases, that public attention is being focussed on the situation. Mr. Gilbert discusses the social cost of industrial accidents, after giving statistics, the employers' liability, etc., and in conclusion suggests some reforms. Index.

Carleton, W:, pseud.

One way out; a middle-class New Englander emigrates to America. Bost., Small, Maynard, ['11.] (Ja28) c. 303 p. D. $1.20 n.

The experiences of a man born of old New England stock, who at the age of thirty-eight lost his position as clerk with a big corporation. After searching vainly for another place, he decides to give up his present way of living and all his associates, and move with his wife and son into the tenement district, taking a job as a day laborer and living as that class does. He and his wife found that emigrants come to this country and succeed and determined to begin as the emigrant does, at the bottom. How he solved his problem and made a success of his life makes an interesting and vivid narrative.

Clifford, Lucy Lane, [Mrs. W. K. Clifford.]

Sir George's objection. N. Y., Duffield, '10, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '10. 2-396 p. D. $1.50.

The heroine is a young English girl who has grown up in Italy under the care of her widowed mother, and who, at eighteen, begins to long for a glimpse of her mother country and her relations, of that English life about which she has heard so much in a tantalizing, fragmentary way from English tourists visiting their remote Italian nook; and she begins to ask her mother questions about the father whose memory she has been taught to revere. Here lies the mystery of the story, and the explanation of its title when a young Englishman wanders that way and asks her hand in marriage.

Clymer, Reuben Swinburne, ["Pythagoras 38," pseud.]

The divine mystery; the gods, known in early ages as the incubi and succubi, now known as the elementals; solving the mystery of the immaculate conception and how it was, and is, possible, giving full instructions for development, and how to come into touch with the elementals; also the human soul before and after death; constitution of man and the universe; key of gospels; gospel initiation, according to Pistis Sophia; the inner mystery. Allentown, Pa., Philosophical Pub., ['11.] (Ja28) c. '10. 181 p. pl. 8°, $25.

Dana, J: Cotton.

Modern American library economy as illustrated by the Newark, N. J., Free Public Library. pt. 5, The school department, section 3, The picture collection. Woodstock, Vt., Elm Tree Press, '10, '[11.] (Ja28) 27 p. il. O. pap., 25 c.

The selection, mounting, filing, exhibiting and lending of the Newark Free Library collection of pictures, numbering about one hundred thousand, are clearly described.

Denton, Clara J.

Entertainments for all the year; more than 30 new and delightful entertainments for Christmas, Thanksgiving Day, New Year's Day, Valentine's Day, Lincoln's birthday, Easter, Arbor Day and all other holidays. Phil., Penn Pub., '10, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '10. 220 p. D. 50 c.; pap., 30 c.

Design and representation. Albany, N. Y., Educ. Dept., '10, ['11.] (Ja28) 34 p. pls. col. pls. O. pap.

Handbook prepared to assist teachers of drawing in the work of instruction as outlined in the syllabus for secondary schools.

Dixon, T:, jr.

The root of evil; a novel; il. [in col.] by G: Wright. Garden City, N. Y., Doubleday, Page, '11. (Ja28) c. 407 p. D. $1.20, fixed.

Another of the author's books laying bare the great problems of American life, and especially the present attitude of woman towards her responsibilities and duties. A girl leaves a lover who cannot get rich quickly because he will only get rich honestly, to marry his friend, who soon becomes a multimillionaire. Later she turns to her first love, but he will not allow her to keep her fortune if he marries her. Jealousy drives her to the climax. The luxury and self-indulgence of the present day reads like a fairy-tale.

Emerton, Ephriam.

Unitarian thought. N. Y., Macmillan, '11. (Ja28) c. 9+309 p. D. $1.50 n.

In his preface the author says the book is intended for three classes of readers, those to whom Unitarianism is merely a name, those who have distinct and unfavorable views of Unitarians as people hostile to most of the cherished beliefs of Christians, and to Unitarians themselves, to remind them of "the treasure they have received from their fathers and their obligation to see that it is not diminished." Mr. Emerton is professor of church history in Harvard University.

Essays in American history dedicated to Frederick Jackson Turner. N. Y., Holt, '10, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '10. 7+293 p. O. $1.50 n.

Essays dedicated to Professor Turner by the authors, his former pupils at the University of Wisconsin, on the occasion of his presidency of the American Historical Association, 1909-10. Contents: Some activities of the Congregational church west of the Mississippi, Lois Kimball Mathews; Oregon pioneers and American diplomacy, Jos. Schaefer; Some problems of the Northwest in 1779, Ja. Alton James; Kansas, Carl Lotus Becker; Federalism and the west, Homer C. Hockett; Independent parties in the western states, 1873-76, Solon Justus Buck; Virginia and the presidential succession,' 1840-44, C: H: Ambler, etc.

Forster, E: Morgan.

Howards End. N. Y., Putnam, '10, ['11.] (Ja28) 5+422 p. D. $1.35.

A great picture of real life among conventional English people among whom comes a wholly unconventional girl. Howards End is an old English Manor House and the plot is chiefly concerned with who is to inherit it.

Greening, C: Earnest.

The Greening pictorial system of landscape gardening; being a system of decorative planting based on pictorial art designed for the easy comprehension of amateur gardeners and as a reference book for landscape architects; the il. contained are true photographs. [Monroe, Mich., C: E. Greening, '11.] (Ja28) c. '10. 165 p. por. (parly col.) obl. 4°, $5.

Hancock, Harrie Irving.

Dick Prescott's first year at West Point; or, two chums in the cadet gray. Phil., Altemus, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '10. 255 p. pls. 12°, (Altemus' West Point ser.) $1.

Herbertson, Jessie Leckie.

Young life. N. Y., Duffield, '11. (Ja28) c. 304 p. D. $1.20 n.

A young English girl, Hester Stanton, is left in the charge of a friend of her father's and when she leaves school, goes to live with a married friend of her guardian. Here she has several love affairs, but her unawakened heart and undeveloped character only come to their own when she eventually marries Stephen Garfield, her guardian.

Hopkins, Alb. Allis, ed.

The Scientific American cyclopedia of formulas; partly based upon the 28th ed. of Scientific American cyclopedia of receipts, notes and queries; 15,000 formulas. N. Y., Munn & Co., '11. (Ja28) c. '10. 7+1077 p. O. $5 n.

Over 15,000 of the most useful formulas and processes, carefully selected from a collection of nearly 150,000, are contained in the volume, nearly every branch of the useful arts being represented. These formulas are classified and arranged in chapters containing related subjects, while a complete index, made by librarians, renders it easy to find any formula desired. A new departure in a book dealing with receipts, is the chapter on chemical, pharmaceutical and technical manipulation, which has been prepared with the aid of well-known chemists. The information contained in this chapter is entirely practical and a careful study of it will go far in saving the expenditure of both money and time. There is also a list of prices of odd, out-of-the-ordinary technical products. Many useful tables are also included.

Jewett, Sarah Orne.

The night before Thanksgiving, A white heron, and selected stories; with introd. notes, and questions and suggestions. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '77-'11. 13+119 p. por. S. (Riverside literature ser.) 25 c.

Book is written in the cause of temperance. Appendix contains a letter to saloon-keepers, a letter to workingmen, a letter to women, and one to a beer advocate.

Kingsley, Mrs. Florence Morse.

To the highest bidder; il. by J: Rae. N. Y., Dodd, Mead, '11. (Ja28) c. 302 p. D. $1.20 n.

Barbara Preston, a beautiful New England girl, has struggled to keep her ancestral farm for her small brother, but at last sees that foreclosure of a mortgage is inevitable. This mortgage is held by a local capitalist who is in love with her. As the day of foreclosure approaches Barbara, at her wits' end, announces that she will go out to service for several years, selling her services to the highest bidder at an auction. The auction is held and the bidding between the capitalist and another unsuccessful lover is brisk. The unique way in which Barbara raises the mortgage and the solving of her other problems will interest many readers. By the author of "The singular Miss Smith."

Klenze, Camillo von, comp. and ed.

Deutsche gedichte; selected, with notes and an introd. 2d ed., rev. N. Y., Holt, '10, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '95-'10 18+332 p. pors. S. 90 c.

Law, Ernest.

Shakespeare as a groom of the chamber. N. Y., Macmillan, '11. (Ja28) 8+64 p. il. 8°, $1.25 n.

Laurence, D. H.

The white peacock; a novel. N. Y., Duffield, '11. (Ja28) c. '10. 496 p. D. $1.30 n.

A novel of English town and country life. The hero George and his loves make a rather unusual character study. He first loves a girl somewhat above him socially who leads him on, and next a farmer's daughter, whom he marries. The incidents are unconventional and the reader's sympathies go out to George even in the end, when he has wrecked himself and his life.

Lewisohn, Ludwig.

German style; an introd. to the study of German prose. N. Y., Holt, '10, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '10. 29+215 p. D. 75 c.

Miller, Annie Louise.

Across three oceans; a woman's tour of the world. Lincoln, Neb., State Journ. Co., ['11.] (Ja28) 192 p. nar. O. $1.50.

The letters making up the book were written in 1909 to the Nebraska State Journal, Lincoln, Neb., by a member of its staff who went alone round the world. An appendix gives the expenses of the trip and will be found useful by those planning such a voyage.

Nearing, Scott.

Social adjustment. N. Y., Macmillan, '11. (Ja28) c. 16+377 p. D. $1.50 n.

Adjustment is an approximation to the normal. Dr. Nearing shows in this book the many phases of maladjustment that exist in this country between the upper and lower grades of society. This maladjustment is due to economic causes, involves social cost, and is remediable through social action. Education, wages, congestion of population, dependence of women, menace of large families, decadence of the American home, overwork, child labor, unemployment, legislative remedies, methods of social adjustment, are some of the aspects of the question discussed.

Ney F: J.

Bookkeeping simplified; with exercises in partnership and departmental accounts, etc.; together with a large collection of examination papers. N. Y., Pitman, ['11.] (Ja28) 7+336 p. D. $1.

Ogden, H: Neely.

Rural hygiene. N. Y., Macmillan, '11. (Ja28) c. 17+434 p. D. $1.50 n.

Author is professor of sanitary engineering in College of Civil Engineering, Cornell University. The book is written with an appreciation of the interdependence of individuals, and therefore deals not only with questions of individual living, but also with those broader questions having to do with the cause and spread of disease, with the transmission of bacteria from one community to another, and with those natural influences which may effect a large area if their destructive tendencies are allowed to develop. Vital statistics of rural life, location and construction of a house, ventilation, water supply, care of milk and meat, etc., are some of the aspects considered.

Osborne, C: Fs.

The family house. Phil., Penn Pub., '10, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '10. 236 p. il. plans, D. $1 n.

The professor of architectural history in the University of Pennsylvania and editor of The American Architect, has here written a book of practical suggestion on home building. He begins with a chapter on house and home, taking up ownership versus rent, the building association, etc., then speaks of the choice of location, whether town or country. From this point he goes on to give hints as to plans, decoration, furnishing, heating, ventilation, and so on.

Patterson, J. E.

Tillers of the soil. N. Y., Duffield, '10, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '10. 11+364 p. D. $1.30 n.

English farming country in Essex is the scene of this story by the author of "Fishers of the sea" and "Watchers by the shore." Abe Shuttleworth and his daughter have been forced to leave Yorkshire because of a dreadful scandal, in which Abe is involved. The woman in the case finds them and insists upon taking up her abode in their house. Abe is in many ways a fine man and has ideas for the betterment of the condition of the agricultural class which he is anxious to carry out, and in which a young American helps him. The sins of the past dog Abe's footsteps and he is forced to leave the country. The inhabitants of an English farming district are vividly pictured and the love of the American for Shuttleworth's daughter makes the background of the tale.

Pell, Sara C.

In Dillafluff Land; with il. by A. G. Learned. Westfield, N. J., Standard Pub. Concern, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '10. no paging, obl. O. bds., $1.

The rhymes tell about what happened "In Dillafluff Land," at the Ozzle-Wonks' ball, and about the activities of a certain band of Boom-a-lasters, and how the Wompo-loos eat up all the lost needles and pins, and many more strange incidents. The full-page illustrations in black and white show the queer inhabitants of Dillafluff Land.

Rowland, H: Cottrell.

The magnet (published serially as the "Pilot-fish"); a romance; il. by Clarence F. Underwood. N. Y., Dodd, Mead, '11. (Ja28) c. '10. 328 p. D. $1.25 n.

A crusty retired naval man with three beautiful daughters lives on the big schooner-yacht "Shark" the greater part of the year. Their sailing master is an old Norwegian, who has really brought up the three girls. A young poet sailing a small boat has followed the yacht all summer and sent verses to one of the daughters, but refuses to meet any of them. Chance throws Hermione, the youngest, and the poet together, and from that moment things begin to happen which go to the making of a most unconventional courtship, amusingly told, and the revelation of a relationship between the poet and the sailing master.

Service, Rob. W.

The trail of '98; a northland romance; with il. by Maynard Dixon. N. Y., Dodd, Mead, '11. (Ja28) c. '10. 7+514 p. D. $1.30 n.

A tragic tale of the Klondike by the author of "The spell of the Yukon," etc., who himself took part in the first mad rush for gold. Athol Meldrum leaves Scotland to seek his fortune in the Northwest. He drifts about California for a time and at last goes north to the Alaska goldfields. On the steamer is a Jewish girl travelling with her grandfather and a disreputable aunt and uncle. The hard life, rough and often vicious men and women are vividly portrayed in the unfolding of the story, of which Meldrum and Berna, the girl, are the leading figures.

Patsy. N. Y., Duffield, '10, ['11.] (Ja28) c. '01. 342 p. D. $1.20 n.

The story of a real Irish boy who acts as page-boy in a big house. He helps the course of true love to run smooth in the case of Dick Fanshawe and Violet Lestrange, and shows himself a true son of the "Ould Sod" by his quick wit and readiness for a fight.

Stearns, Wallace Nelson.

The Publishers' Weekly
FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT

January 28, 1911

The editor is not responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

Publishers should send books promptly for weekly record and descriptive annotation, if possible in advance of publication. The Record of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE BOOKS OF 1910.

MORE and more appalling becomes the flood of books which apply to THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for bibliographical register and ever more difficult the task of selection for this annual retrospective survey in the Annual Summary Number of the WEEKLY.

Indeed it is not too much to say that this summary must very shortly become—in fact it has already become—merely an indication of certain phases, or salient tendencies, of the past year's publications; and that only a very few books can be individually noticed in review even when they stand out indubitably in the front rank.

For the third consecutive year the verdict on the year's FICTION must be that while it is fair in average merit, there are few or no titles that seem to rank high. George Meredith was represented only by an unfinished novel, and Rudyard Kipling by a volume of short stories. Most of the men—and women—who have been turning out excellent work continue to do so; H. G. Wells in "Mr. Polly," and Winston Churchill in "A Modern Chronicle" being of those who show splendid surety and increasing ability in literary craftsmanship. Others—Mrs. Humphry Ward in "Lady Merton, Colonist," Henryk Sienkiewicz in "Whirlpools," William De Morgan in "An Affair of Dishonor"—show a distinct falling off from earlier works.

"Mystery" stories, using the word in its widest meaning, have marked the year's output, H. Rider Haggard, Roman Doubleday, Louis Joseph Vance, Harold MacGrath, Anna Katherine Green and Gouverneur Morris being a few, among many well-known authors, who catered to this demand. Short stories also enjoyed a renaissance.

Salaciousness seems to have transferred its appeal from fiction to BIOGRAPHY, for the erotic novel, as a popular selling proposition, is a thing of the past. The American people may well be congratulated that "The Rosary," the stories of L. M. Montgomery, such novels as "Little Sister Snow," "The Rose in the Ring" and "The Silver Horde"—all among the "best sellers" of 1910—are all clean, wholesome stories.

The output of fiction has shown a slight relative dimunition. Biography, however, is being unfortunately overdone, and overdone, at that, in an undesirable direction. There have been several biographies of importance, notably O. G. Villard's "John Brown," Aylmer Maude's "Life of Tolstoi" and Lord Rosebery's "Lord Chatham." But there has been, beside, a mass of "memoirs" and "reminiscences"—most of them, to our credit be it said, imported—of various worthies of the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries; the best of it ill-digested, hastily compiled and generally unnecessary, the worst of it only too evidently prepared for its "spicy" flavor. Fortunately the gross sale of this stuff is small, but the recording and distribution of it clogs the trade and the book press.

Reflecting the popular interest and demand RELIGION and PHILOSOPHY continue to sink in the scale of comparative importance—and this despite the fact that an immense amount of English-made theological works are imported by such houses as the Oxford University Press, Longmans, Green & Company and George H. Doran—just as SOCIOLOGY and ECONOMICS grow.

Books of the latter class are quite the feature of 1910. There are many of them, the subjects treated are of vital public interest, the viewpoints all eminently optimistic and the books, especially those which aim to give practical information, are usually well done. They are an instance of fruit being borne by such agencies as the Sage Foundation and the hand and method of the trained investigator.

Pure LITERATURE perhaps never made a poorer showing than this year, poetry of promise being especially lacking. A few volumes of worth while essays, and the increasing interest in the book form publication of contemporary plays, are the only bright relief.

The literary necrology of the year has been unusually long. In this country Mark Twain, in many respects our foremost writer, headed the list, on which, however, were also such names as William Vaughn Moody, Dr. Henry Harrisse, the historian, O. Henry, Dr. William J. Rolfe, Professor William James and Goldwin Smith. Four American women, utterly diverse in output, but each with an enormous circle of readers, should also be mentioned—Julia Ward Howe, Rebecca Harding Davis, Myra Kelly and Mrs. Mary Baker Glover Eddy.

Abroad saw finis written after even greater names—Björnson Björnstjerne in Norway, Tolstoi in Russia. England recorded the death of William Holman-Hunt, Frank Podmore and Florence Nightingale, and France that of Leopold De Lisle, her great bibliographer.

FICTION.

Novels are put on the market at the rate of three or four a day. The author's name or the advertised subject or the advertised popularity determine their longer or shorter career. After a while almost all are forgotten, and readers are always reading the latest and the newest. It is worth while, however, to be reminded each year what were the books of real value, even though in the great rush of quantity the quality of these books has not always brought them into their own. American novels that should be read, no matter what date is stamped on the title-page, whenever the reader meets with them are here given: "Nathan Burke," by Mrs. Mary Stanbury Watts, gives a vivid picture of life in Ohio in the fifties, before and during the Mexican war, and a successful lawyer tells of his self-made life; "Jim Hands," by Richard Washburn Child, makes a special study of factory life, and brings together people of all nationalities and varieties of temperament, with a heroine who will live; Winston Churchill's "A Modern Chronicle" studies the burning American divorce question with insight and great fairness; "A Circuit Rider's Wife," by Mrs. Cora Harris, gives an inspiring report of the actual experiences of a Methodist travelling preacher and his wife in the Middle South; and "Hearts Contending," by Georg Schock, tells of a German Pennsylvania valley and the working out of the lives of people of strong character in their quaint, simple surroundings. Robert Herrick, borrowing Miss Mulock's title, "A Life for a Life," interprets "the writing on the wall" for the business world of America in the forcible manner in which he arraigned American married life in his outspoken "Together;" Mary Ella Waller, the author of "The Wood-Carver of 'Lympus," in "Flamsted Quarries" shows up the present day conditions of American life—social and industrial; and William Hamilton Osborne in "The Running Fight" tells a startling story of "high finance" in the panic of 1907. "By Inheritance" treats the negro problem of the South in "Octave Thanet's" convincing way; Hamlin Garland in "Cavanagh, Forest Ranger," throws light on the new forest laws for the protection of produce in the vast unappropriated lands of the United States; "Jack London's "Burning Daylight" depicts a man of power contending with conditions in the Arctic and Klondike regions, whose stenographer leads him to self-sacrifice and true ideals; Robert W. Chambers' "Ailsa Page" is a strong story of the war between the States; Marion Crawford's last book, "The Undesirable Governess," is better than the first verdict said; and James Lane Allen's "The Doctor's Christmas Eve" is the second of the trilogy of stories begun with "The Bride of the Mistletoe," and is full of good introspective work without sufficient motive. Basil King confessed authorship of "The Wild Olive," as well as of "The Inner Shrine," which preceded it. It is a fine story of a man convicted of murder and rescued by a girl artist, who starts him to Argentina and shapes a new career for him. "The Mirage of the Many," by William T. Walsh, is a prophetic story of the results of a socialistic regime on the different classes of society, of which the scene is supposed to be in Chicago in 1952; "Anne Kempburn," by Marguerite Bryant, is a close study of present day economics, reforms and constructive mission work among the poor; "Dr. Thorne's Idea," by John Ames Mitchell, brings out the theory of the underlying good in every human being; "The Eagle's Feather," by Mrs. Emily Price Post, tells of a devoted woman who sacrifices her life and good name to help a genius work out his dreams; "The Crossways," by Helen Reimensnyder Martin, is the story of a doctor and his southern wife, laid among the uncongenial Pennsylvania Dutch; and "Tess of the Storm Country," by Mrs. Grace Miller White, is a tale of squatters in the neighborhood of Cornell University, in which a girl's gross ignorance and beautiful religious faith bring about the climax. James Paul Kelly, in "Prince Izon," tells brilliantly of the Grand Canyon of Colorado and of a remnant of the Aztec race supposed to have descended from Montezuma's contemporaries; Mrs. Deland, in "The Way to Peace," gives fine pictures of followers of the Shaker faith; Mrs. Ruth McEnery Stuart in "The Unlived Life of Little Mary Ellen" gives a psychologic study of a woman's mind unhinged by disappointment, who finds comfort through her strong instinct of motherhood; and Lucy Maud Montgomery introduces "Kilmeny of the Orchard," and proves her a heroine worthy to mate with "Anne of Green Gables" and "Anne of Avonlea," who preceded her. Strong, virile stories are "The Song of the Wolf," by Frank Mayer, the story of a Yale graduate who goes West and works out his history on a cattle ranch and in a gold mine; and "When Cattle Kingdom Fell," by J. R. Stafford, is a very original story of wild cattle days in the vast forests of Texas. "Mollie Make-Believe" has something of the plot of "Margery Daw," and is delightfully brought before the reader by Eleanor Hallowell Abbott, who has twice won the Collier $1000 prize; and Mrs. Atherton, in "The Tower of Ivory," shows sure knowledge of music and those who make it their life-work.

The finest literary work in fiction came from England. Samuel Butler, author of "Erewhon" and "Erewhon Revisited," worked on "The Way of All Flesh" for twelve years, and died before his story of modern English life and character was given the world by R. A. Streatfield. It is a ridicule of vain pretension, a showing up of humbug in education, politics and religion, a study in heredity and a great picture of the latter half of the Victorian era. It is long since so good a novel has been written. Arnold Bennett wrote several tales, long and short, and did really fine work in "Clayhanger," who left school in 1872 and went through business, a tragic love episode, and the death of his father before he reached the settlement in life, about which the author promises a new volume. A well-known English writer, who prefers to write anonymously, has produced a little masterpiece in "Letters to My Son," in which a young wife writes her innermost thoughts to the child she is expecting, hoping, to be a guide to him through life in case she never sees him. In "The Creators" May Sinclair has written a strong problem story, dealing largely with literary people and discussing the question whether it is possible for a genius to marry without sacrificing either the happiness of the family or the highest possibilities of creative work. Edward Verrall Lucas, in "Mr. Ingleside," again put his idiosyncrasies and philosophies and expert knowledge of human nature into the story of a dear, lovable, aggravating man, of his wife devoted to problem novels and his original daughters, and incidentally the author of "Over Bemerton's" here handled the suffragette question. The leading characteristics of the German and English nations are brought out with power in Grafin von Arnim's "The Caravaners," in which a German officer of rank and his pretty young wife travel for a month with unconventional English acquaintances through beautiful English country. The officer finds the vagaries of the English incomprehensible; he knows the English are degenerating, and knows they will soon be swallowed up by Germany. Knowledge of both nations and of all human nature are used to fine ends. The erratic genius of Arnold Bennett again finds scope in "Buried Alive," the story of an English painter who upon the death of his valet allows him to be buried in Westminster Abbey and then impersonates him, giving up his own identity, his innate shyness making it impossible for him to live his life as the great painter he has become. M. Little lays the scene of "At the Sign of the Burning Bush" chiefly in Scotland. Three divinity students and the equally original women who influence them show their personalities, physical, mental and moral, as sketched by a master hand. Vincent Brown, in "The Glory and the Abyss," does exceptional work in the tale of a dissipated father, of the mother of fourteen children, and of the self-sacrificing oldest son of the household. The character drawing of a daughter who runs her father's parish, and of her uncle, an original scientist, is done with rare touch. "A Marriage Under the Terror," by Patricia Wentworth, received the first prize awarded in the Melrose novel competition; De Morgan, in "An Affair of Dishonor," wrote a story of eighteenth century England; Louis Joseph Vance wrote a rapid narrative of a double crime in "No Man's Land," equalling his successful "The Brass Bowl;" Herbert G. Wells wrote one of his works of genius in "The History of Mr. Polly," a criticism of arbitrary training without regard to individuality told with all the humor and pathos that distinguish his wonderful writings; he also produced "The New Machiavelli," a novel of modern life and society; and W. J. Locke, in "Simon the Jester," has written a fine story of the attainment of happiness through altruism. "Queen Sheba's Ring" and "Morning Star," the first laid in North Central Africa, the second in Egypt thousands of years ago, both show

Rider Haggard's undaunted imagination as compelling as in his first youth; Stacpoole lets "The Pools of Silence," a story of big game shooting in the rubber country of Africa, give a fearless criticism of things done in the name of civilization, and makes daring statements about the late King Leopold of the Belgians; and he writes a poetic tragedy in "The Crimson A[illegible]s" with all the fine finish of "The Blue Lagoon." Harold Bindloss has written two strong stories of the wilds of Northwestern Canada in "Masters of the Wheatlands" and "Thurston of Orchard Valley;" and Ian Hay has begun a promising literary career with "The Right Stuff," giving an interesting picture of English political life; and "A Man's Man," in which a Cambridge graduate after years of travel becomes the guardian of an attractive, wilful maiden. Frank Danby's "Let the Roof Fall In" has an Irish hero, and is well done throughout and full of interest. The pen that drew the delightful "Post Girl" again lets comedy and tenderness mingle in "The Doctor's Lass," and Edward C. Booth will in future find readers waiting for all he writes. Ernest Temple Thurston's "The Greatest Wish in the World" is the story of a girl waif left to the care of a Catholic priest and his elderly housekeeper; Emily Jenkinson's "Silverwool" tells of English sheep farmers and a deformed curate's life-work among them; and loyal friendship between a man and a woman is convincingly described by "Yorke Curtis" in "Wayward Anne." A fine work of imagination is Horace Annesley Vachell's "The Other Side," a mystic story of a musician with two conflicting natures; "The Master-Girl," by Ashton Hilliers, is a story of peril and savagery among our cave ancestors. Eden Phillpotts has produced still another of his great pictures of Devonshire country and humanity in "The Thief of Virtue;" and Mrs. Voynich has let the "Gadfly" she created in 1897 appear once more in "An Interrupted Friendship," full of discussions on literature and world questions.

Twenty-five volumes of short stories show the names of experts and favorites in this difficult form of fiction in which America excels.

The Canadian writer, Agnes Christina Laut, in "The Freebooters of the Wilderness," exploits the illegal holding of forest and virgin land, one of the nation's great forms of corruption in the Northwest.

One of the most remarkable novels that the French have ever sent us is Romain Rolland's "Jean-Christophe," planned to occupy ten volumes in its original, of which the first four have reached us in translation in one volume. The author seems to plan a book in which he can put everything that has ever interested him, all the music, art and literature to which he has devoted his life, and George Moore and Edmund Gosse have pronounced it an epoch-making study of the soul of a great German musician.

Selma Lagerlöf, the Swedish winner of the Nobel prize of $40,000 for fiction last year, has sent out a book of collected stories, of which the longest is "The Girl from the Marsh Croft," the story of a girl who first went wrong, but redeems herself completely. The volume includes a bit of autobiography, telling how the prize "Story of Gosta Berling" grew.

The Polish writer, Sienkiewicz, gives us more good work in "Whirlpools," a story of Polish rural life in which socialism plays its part.

Incidentally it may be mentioned that the Nobel prize for fiction this year went to the German veteran writer, Paul Heyse.

Books teaching how to write fiction may also find fitting mention here. Essays on Modern Novelists," by William Lyon Phelps, Lampson professor of English literature in Yale University, criticises the art of De Morgan, Hardy, Howells, Sudermann, Kipling, Stevenson, etc.; "A History of Story-Telling," by Arthur Ransome, presents fine studies in the development of narrative, covering from the Middle Ages to the art of Guy de Maupassant; and Duncan Francis Young has prepared a practical book called "The Fiction Writer's Workshop," presenting a digest of modern fiction writing, embracing a dictionary of the terms, tools, technique, plan and construction of fiction.

BIOGRAPHY, MEMOIRS, CORRESPONDENCE.

Differing from our usual plan we shall this year report on the biographical works of value according to the occupation of the men and women who have been written about during 1910 and not separate them by nationality of author or of subject. The year was notable for the number of biographies of authors and artists. Howell's "My Mark Twain" was received with acclamation; and "Life and Letters of Edmund Clarence Stedman," by his granddaughter and Dr. George Milbry Gould are volumes rich in reminiscence and anecdote of Stedman's famous contemporaries in letters, including many judgments of Swinburne upon American writers first written in letters to Stedman. The biography of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe by her daughter, Marion Harland's Autobiography, and George Cary Eggleston's "Recollections of a Varied Life" are full of the literary and domestic history of the United States that it will benefit the present generation to "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest;" and "Leading American Novelists" have a thoughtful volume devoted to them by John Erskine of Columbia University.

S. M. Ellis's "William Harrison Ainsworth and His Friends" is the authoritative biography in two volumes of the great romance writer, who was also one of the most conspicuous and picturesque figures in the literary and social life of the nineteenth century and met every man of note from 1805 to 1882. The first volume of "The Life of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield," planned by Moneypenny of the London Times to occupy four volumes, has appeared, and this monumental work will throw needed light on the life of Queen Victoria's great Prime Minister and his greatest contemporaries. Mrs. William Sharp has compiled a memoir of "William Sharp" and acknowledged his identity with "Fiona Macleod," which so long puzzled the reading world; and there are biographies and literary estimates of great merit of "Dean Swift," by Sophie Shiletto Smith, who considers him one of the geniuses of all time and writes a fine psychologic dissertation on this man born a century before his time; J. Robert Herrick, Robert Browning, Jane Austen, George Eliot, Maurice Hewlett, and Bernard Shaw, all revealing scholarly criticism and the fairness of wide culture.

Brander Matthews has given years of study to "Molière: His Life and Works," and presents a striking picture of Molière's relations to the period in which he lived; Frederick Lawton writes of "Balzac" and how his novels are literally his life; and René Domic of the French Academy has written a fine creative criticism of "George Sand" and her wonderful novels and still more wonderful life. At the moment of Tolstoy's death Aylmer Maude finished his exhaustive two volume biography on which Tolstoy and the Countess did careful work of revision. A little gem of criticism is William Morton Payn's "Björnstjerne Björnson," written for the celebration of his seventieth birthday in 1902.

Actors, musicians and painters received tribute in "Memories and Impressions of Helena Modjeska"; William Winter's "Life and Art of Richard Mansfield;" Mrs. Page's "Edward MacDowell;" Richard Hoffman's "Some Musical Recollections of Fifty Years"; Agnes G. Murphy's "Melba"; Finck's "Massenet and His Operas;" two books on Whistler; a new translation of "Benvenuto Cellini;" Elihu Vedder's "Digressions of V.," an autobiographical confidential confession full of facts and delicious humor; and Michel's "Great Masters of Landscape Painting."

Lives of great potentates and men of political power included two biographies of King Edward VII.; Angelo S. Rappaport's "Leopold the Second: King of the Belgians," showing the remarkable ability of this monarch and giving many facts of the Congo atrocities; Henri de Weindel's "The Real Francis-Joseph," an intimate and personal account of the Emperor of Austria; Edward Legge's "The Empress Eugénie, 1870-1910;" "The Rise of Louis Napoleon," by F. A. Simpson; and impossible as it appears, four works on Napoleon I.: "The Corsican," chiefly in his own words; Sloane's "Life of Napoleon," revised, of which almost one-tenth is new material; "Napoleon in Caricature" (1795-1821), in which Arthur Meyrick Broadley has collected the contributions to the journals of those days; and "Napoleon in His Own Defence," by Clement K. Shorter. "Porfirio Diaz, President of Mexico," "Gambetta: Life and Letters," and Fuller's "Cecil John Rhodes" describe three great leaders. Silvanus P. Thompson's "Life of William Thomson" (Baron Kelvin), and Dyer and Commerford's "Edison, His Life and Inventions" are great contributions to science; and David Starr Jordan has edited a volume on "Leading American Men of Science."

Careers that have shaped United States history may be studied in Villard's "John Brown;" Crook's 'Through Five Administrations;" "The Diary of James K. Polk" in four volumes; Richard Watson Gilder's "Grover Cleveland;" "Intimate Life of Alexander Hamilton;" "Recollections of Alexander Stephens: Vice-President of the Confederacy;" "Life of Hiram Paulding, Rear-Admiral;" "An Admiral's Log (Admiral Evans);" and John Lothrop Motley and His Family." Educational and social reform is embodied in Jane Addams' "Twenty Years in Hull House;" "Life of Mary Lyon;" "Bishop Potter, the People's Friend;" "Life of Daniel Coit Gilman;" and "Karl Marx, His Life and Work," a fine study by John Spargo.

DESCRIPTION AND TRAVEL.

Peary's "The North Pole," coming just after the Cook excitement, was easily the leading travel book of the year.

Twenty-five books dealt with Africa. Ex-President Roosevelt's reputation and the publicity of its appearance in Scribner's Magazine, made Roosevelt's "African Game Trails" the leader among them. But books of far more importance in increasing the knowledge of the world were: Sir Lagden's "The Basutos," the mountaineers occupying 10,000 square miles of South Africa, a tribe that has made the colonization of Africa specially difficult; Herbert Ward's "A Voice from the Congo," dealing with Central Africa; Alfred J. Swann's "Fighting the Slave Hunters in Central Africa;" the Duke of Mecklenburg's "In the Heart of Africa;" Sir Harry Johnston's "George Grenfell and the Congo;" and several books that dealt with the government of Morocco and the atrocities reported from the rubber producing districts under King Leopold's rule, notably Lawrence Harris's "With Mulai Hafid at Fez;" and Ashmead Bartlett's "The Passing of the Shereefian Empire." Japan and China were treated of in at least a dozen books of permanent value. Walter Tyndale's "Japan and the Japanese;" George Trumbull Ladd's "Rare Days in Japan;" "China and the Far East" (Clark University lectures); Lord and Lady Cecil's "Changing China" (writers sent by Committee formed by Oxford and Cambridge); Geil's "The Great Wall of China" and Lindon Wallace Bates's "The Russian Road to China" are not better than many others, but they cover many of the best known and most telling ethnological and political problems. Sven Anders Hedin's "Overland to India," an exhaustive work in two volumes, and "Robert Smythe Hichens's "The Holy Land," are full of new information.

South America was even more politically troubled than usual, but travellers undauntedly went to find the reasons for this and to describe natural and man-made conditions. Some of the results were Mozans's "Up the Orinoco and down the Magdalena," following the wanderings of the Spanish conquerors when they made their almost incredible explorations in the search for fabulous wealth; Pennington's "The Argentine Republic;" Fife's "The Great States of South America;" and the Beebes' "Our Search for a Wilderness," in which the Curator of Ornithology in Central Park, New York City, and his wife studied the birds of Venezuela and Brititsh Guiana. Besides in Peary's book Arctic exploration was made real in Mrs. Wright's 'The Great White North," which presents the work of the long line of Arctic explorers from earliest times to the discovery of the pole; and in Deltus M. Edwards's "The Toll of the Arctic Seas," in which this specialist on Arctic exploration gives the chronicle of the expeditions of Barents, Hudson, Bering, Franklin, Greely, Nansen, Amundsen, Peary, etc. In "Hunting with the Esquimos" Harry Whitney (with whom Dr. Cook claimed to have left his records) gives a unique record of a sportsman's year among the northernmost tribe; and Paul Niedeck in "Cruises in Bering Sea" retails his hunting experiences in Siberia and Alaska.

The duty of the United States to investigate and correct conditions worse than those of Russia and Turkey in Gautemala, Nicaragua, etc., was the great keynote of Frederick Palmer's "Central America and Its Problems." Panama and the canal, Oberammergau and the "Passion Play" drew many travellers, and some wrote illuminating books; three very exhaustive volumes were devoted to the great historic universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and the most remote lands and waters were travelled through and written about. The books will all be found in the big list in this issue under their subjects.

HISTORY.

The most ambitious work was John Clark Ridpath's "Ridpath's History of the World," from the beginnings of civilization to the present time, comprising the development of social institutions and the story of all nations, gotten up in nine large volumes at $65. Volume 6 appeared in Avery's "History of the United States and Its People," to be finished in fifteen volumes; the concluding volume 5 in Bradford's "Bibliographers Manual of American History;" and volume 7 in McMasters's "History of People of the United States," covering the great financial problems, the rush to California, the history of the Mormons, etc. No less than eighteen books were devoted exclusively to American Indians, and libraries can add fine material to their collections on Indian history, customs, literature, music, etc. Ellen Chase's "Beginnings of the American Revolution;" Stark's "Loyalists of Massachusetts and the Other Side of the American Revolution;" Philip Alexander Bruce's "Institutional History of Virginia in the 17th Century;" and "The Spanish Regime in Missouri," a very valuable collection of documents edited by Louis Houck, bring American history to the Civil War. George Cary Eggleston tells "The History of the Confederate War," in two volumes; and John Formby studies "The American Civil War" in a concise history of its causes, progress and results. A very valuable contribution to this period is John Bigelow Jr.'s "The Campaign of Chancellorsville," a strategic and technical study, with maps and plans, the material having been used in a course of lectures delivered when the author was Professor of Military Science and Tactics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Morris Schaff, whose work on "The Spirit of Old West Point" was so highly praised by experts, has added "The Battle of the Wilderness" to Civil War documents.

"Europe Since 1815" is written by Charles Downer Hazen, of Smith College; and notable books on English history are the concluding volumes of Lord Acton's great 'Cambridge Modern History," in twelve volumes; the first volumes of "History of England," to be completed in 7 volumes, each written by a specialist and under the editorship of Charles William Oman, Chicele Professor of History in the University of Oxford; volumes 6-8 of Hunt and Poole's "Political History of England," in 8 volumes; Corbett's "Campaign of Trafalgar," treating the subject technically and not as an apotheosis of Nelson; Maxwell's "A Century of Empire;" and O'Donnell's "History of the Irish Parliamentary Party."

Twenty years of research went into "The French Revolution: a Political History, 1789-1804," in 4 volumes, by Aulard, Professor of Letters at the University of Paris; Christopher T. Atkinson has written "A History of Germany, 1715-1815;" William Emerton Heitland covers "The Roman Republic" in 3 volumes; and China, Japan and Africa are specially taken care of in this year's historical output. 'The Servian People: Their Past Glory and Their Destiny," by Prince and Princess Lazarovitch, is full of much needed information in treating present world-racking political conditions in Europe.

POLITICAL AND SOCIAL.

The only way to attempt a selection of the constantly growing literature of this class, most of which is written by thinkers and of great merit, is to keep in mind the questions most complicating the conditions between man and man the world over and to direct attention to the books most calculated to make each man do better thinking. In our American life, federal, state and city government, peaceful, practical relations between capital and labor; the conservation of natural resources, the problems of free education, of the railroads, of the woman question and the race question, especially the negro question and the question of insuring a problematic international peace at a fabulous expense for unused armies and navies—are all before the voting citizens. Which of the books written this year can help them?

James Bryce completely revised his "American Commonwealth," and brought his valuable thoughts on all these subjects up to date since his revision in 1893. Also dealing with the whole country are Lyman Abbott's "The Spirit of Democracy;" Dr. Van Dyke's "The Spirit of America;" William Allen White's "The Old Order Changeth;" "Conditions of Progress in Democratic Government," by Charles Evans Hughes, ex-Governor of New York State, now on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States; Charles Zueblin's "Democracy and the Overman," a book of great merit; and Frederic Clemson Howe's "Privilege and Democracy in America" (a warning dealing with the gradual monopoly of the land of the country). City problems are dealt with in Wilcox's "Great Cities of America;" Hamilton's "Dethronement of City Boss;" Hapgood's "Types from City Streets;" Fuld's "Police Administration;" Eno's "Street Traffic Regulations;" Leonard's great "History of the City of New York, 1609-1909," gotten out by the Journal of Commerce; and F. F. Cook's "Bygone Days in Chicago;" and the Russell Sage Foundation enabled the Charities Publication Committee to bring out "Correction and Prevention," in 4 volumes; and "Housing Reform," by Lawrence Veiller, covering a great problem in American cities. The vast business interests were handled wisely in Crosby's "Strikes," aiming to help both sides to clearer vision and wider charity; Gompers's "Labor in Europe and America;" Mallock's "The Nation as a Business Firm;" Rowntree's "Land and Labor: Lessons from Belgium;" Hobson's "The Industrial System;" and Professor Eliot's "Future of Trades-unionism and Capitalism in a Democracy." Gifford Pinchot's "Fight for Conservation" is certainly written by one who knows and paid the price of expressing honest convictions; and John L. Mathews writes on "The Conservation of Water." From many books on railways we lift out as specially practical James J. Hill's (the millionaire railroad president) "Highways of Progress," telling of the building of the great Northwest; Van Wagenan's "Government Ownership of Railways Considered as Next Step in American Progress;" McPherson's "Transportation in Europe with Maps," and Vrooman's "American Railway Problems in the Light of European Experience" (advocates government ownership). The woman question meets at least sane if not as yet quite practical consideration in Rheta Child Dorr's 'What Eight Million Women Want" (suffrage); E. Sylvia Pankhurst's "The Suffragette" (an account of the movement); Grace C. Strachan's "Equal Pay for Equal Work" (teachers of the city of New York); MacLean's "Wage-Earning Women" (facts about 135,000 women; introduction by Grace Dodge); and Eugene A. Hecker's "Short History of Progress of Woman's Rights from the Days of Augustus to the Present Time" (with special reference to England and the United States). The negro really needs more thought than almost all else in our States to-day. He is handled in a dozen books: Albert Bushnell Hart's "The Southern South;" Gilbert T. Stephenson's "Race Distinctions in American Law;" William Archer's "Through Afro-America," an English reading of the race problem, etc. International peace is treated by John Bigelow in "The Folly of Building Temples of Peace with Untempered Mortar;" Captain Mahan's "Interest of America in International Conditions;" and "American Addresses at the Second Hague Peace Conference."

MISCELLANEOUS.

Aerial Navigation is interesting the world, and at least two dozen books explained it. The most exhaustive were Alphonse Berget's "Conquest of the Air, Aeronautics, Aviation, History, Theory and Practice;" "Model Balloons and Flying Machines," by J. H. Alexander, wholly scientific with sheets of detail drawings; Mowbray's "Conquest of the Air by Airships and Other Flying Machines," etc.

AMERICAN BOOK PRODUCTION, 1910.

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has in the "Weekly Record of New Publications" recorded 13,470 titles, of which 11,671 were new books and 1799 new editions. This is the largest book production for any year since the WEEKLY has been issued. The book-trade in general reports that on the whole the past twelve months have been prosperous, and in spite of the large number of books issued it is not suffering from over-production. In 1909 we recorded 10,901 titles, of which 10,193 were new books, while 708 were new editions, the gain for 1910 being 2569 titles. Of the whole number of books 4325 were received in this office and 9145 represent new editions, publications imported only in limited numbers and not sent for notice titles reported by publishers, and others taken from the accession cards received from the Library of Congress and gathered from every available source by the staff of our bibliographical department.

Table No. 1 gives a comparison between the two years. Literature and collected works again leads with 2042, a gain of 906 books over 1909; an aftermath of editions of the works of the many men whose centenaries were celebrated in 1909, probably accounts for the large number of books in this class; fiction has 1539, an increase of 441; religion once more holds third place, but the gain is only 40 over the previous year's record. In almost every class an increase is shown, the greatest being in fiction, as shown above, and the next among juveniles, 298 more being recorded here. The increase in useful arts is 72, political and social science 156, poetry and drama 81, physical and mathematical science 91, law 87, biography and correspondence 81, description and travel 125; history shows a gain of only 23, while medicine and hygiene shows a loss of 212, which can hardly be accounted for; and humor and satire has also fallen off, having 26 titles less than in 1909.

Table No. 2 shows approximately the number of books manufactured in the United States during 1910. For neither of these tables do we claim absolute accuracy, but they are useful as giving an estimate of the character and numerical importance of American book production. The table gives, first, books by American authors; second, those by English or foreign writers, made in this country according to the requirements of the copyright law; these two classes added to those books in English, imported bound, or in sheets, make up the year's output. Copyright books largely make up the first and second sections. American authors are represented by 9209 books as against 8308 in 1909; 1215 by English or foreign authors (made here) against 828 of 1909, and 3046 books in sheets imported, against 1765 of 1909. Reprints of works by foreign authors have for years fallen behind the imported books in number, and 1910 is no exception to this apparently well established rule. Fiction again leads in reprints, as it has usually done, though last year literature and general works usurped first place in this respect. A centenary seems also responsible for this change, Dickens having been honored by many publishers by complete editions of his novels.

ENGLISH BOOK PRODUCTION, 1910.

THIS year, in spite of the occurrence of two general elections and of the lamented death of King Edward VII., The Publishers' Circular, of London, again chronicles a slight increase in the output of books. The total for the year is 10,804, as compared with 10,725 for last year, an increase of 79. Taken class by class, the figures show increases in the following subjects: Religion and Philosophy, 42; Educational, 30; Law, 5; Social Science, 64; Arts and Sciences, 53; Voyages and Travels, 71; Poetry and Drama, 115; Medicine, 51; while the following subjects

REPORT OF THE REGISTER OF COPYRIGHTS FOR 1909-10.

THE following is a summary of the report of Thorvald Solberg, the Register of Copyrights, for the fiscal year 1909-1910:

RECEIPTS.

The gross receipts during the year were $113,662.83. A balance of $2,275.45, representing trust funds and unfinished business, was on hand July 1, 1909, making a total of $115,938.28 to be accounted for. Of this amount the sum of $4,519.62, received by the Copyright Office was refunded as excess fees or as fees for articles not registrable, leaving a net balance of $111,418.66. The balance carried over to July 1, 1910, was $6773.71 (representing trust funds, $6389.73, and total unfinished business since July 1, 1897—thirteen years—$383.98), leaving for fees applied during the fiscal year 1909-10, $104,644.95.

This is an increase in fees over the previous fiscal year of $20,828.20.

EXPENDITURES.

The appropriation made by Congress for salaries in the Copyright Office for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, was $87,860. The total expenditure for salaries was $87,761.97, or $16,882.98 less than the net amount of fees earned and paid into the Treasury during the corresponding year. The expenditure for supplies, except furniture, including stationery, and other articles, and postage on foreign mail matter,, etc., was $1197.98.

During the thirteen fiscal years since the reorganization of the Copyright Office (from July 1, 1897, to June 30, 1910), the total receipts have exceeded a million dollars ($1,017,350.79); the copyright fees applied and paid into the Treasury have amounted to nearly a million dollars ($963,067.70); the articles deposited number considerably over two millioi (2,372,943), and the total copyright registrations exceed a million (1,341,603).

The fees ($963,067.70) were larger than the appropriations for salaries used during the same period ($817,267.82) by $145,799.88. In addition to this direct profit, a large proportion of the 2,373,000 books, maps, prints, and other articles deposited during the thirteen years were of substantial pecuniary value and of such a character that their accession to the Library of Congress through the Copyright Office effected a saving to and 11,433 were registrations of photographs without certificates, at 50 cents each. There were also 1007 registrations of renewals at 50 cents each. The fees for these registrations amounted to a total of $102,854.

The number of registrations in each class from July 1, 1909, to June 30, 1910, as compared with the number of entries made in the previous year, is shown in Exhibit F.

The various articles deposited in compliance with the new copyright law, which have been registered, stamped, indexed, and catalogued during the fiscal year, amount to 197,313. In addition there were books, periodicals, dramas, music, and photographs to the number of 21,711, deposited to complete entries made during the previous fiscal year (1908-9), under the law then in force, which had not been previously catalogued or enumerated. The total number of articles deposited is, therefore, 219,024. The number of these articles in each class for the thirteen fiscal years is shown in Exhibit G.

COPYRIGHT CATALOGUE AND INDEX, BULLETINS AND CIRCULARS.

The permanent title-index for the fiscal year numbered 82,861. After being first used as the copy for the printed Catalogue, these cards were added to the permanent card indexes of the copyright entries. During the year the work of reducing the size of the card index by means of condensing entries for sets, etc., on ten and twelve line cards and eliminating duplicates was continued, and as a result 15,960 cards were withdrawn. The index now numbers a total of over 1,786,000 cards.

The publication of the Catalogue of Copyright Entries has been continued as required by law. For convenience of search the volumes are made to cover the works published and deposited during the calendar year rather than the fiscal year. Five volumes in all were printed for the year 1909, containing altogether 4752 pages of permanent matter, the temporary monthly indexes being discarded when the volumes are bound. The Catalogue is divided into four parts according to subject-matter, and each part is sold separately at a nominal subscription rate within the maximum price established by law, as follows:

Part I, Books, pamphlets, dramatic compositions, and maps, $1; Part II, Periodicals, 50 cents; Part III, Musical compositions, $1; Part IV, Prints, including chromos and lithographs; photographs, and the descriptions of original works of art—painting, drawings, and sculpture, 50 cents. The subscriptions are by express provisions of the copyright act required to be paid to the Superintendent of Documents (Office of the Public Printer, Washington, D. C.), and all subscriptions must be for the complete year for each part. The price for the entire Catalogue for the year is $3.

Part I of the Catalogue is published in two volumes, "Group I" containing mainly the titles of all books of the year for which title cards are printed and sold to libraries, and "Group II," containing the titles of deposited pamphlets, leaflets, and contributions to periodicals, as well as preliminary reports of court decisions, local directories, herd-books, etc. Group I is issued in weekly parts and reprints in full the title cards prepared by the Catalogue Division of the Library of Congress, with complete bibliographical notes. Volume 6, for 1909, contains 1392 pages of text, and a complete index of authors, copyright proprietors, and titles of anonymous books, 180 pages.

Volume 6 of Group II, for 1909, contains 832 pages of text and an index of authors, copyright proprietors, and titles, 216 pages additional. Of Part II, Periodicals, volume 4 for 1909, contains 588 pages, and a index of titles and copyright proprietors, 48 pages. Of Part III, Musical and dramatico-musical compositions, volume 4 for 1909, contained 1117 pages of text and a complete index of composers and copyright proprietors, 379 pages. Of Part IV, Works of art and pictorial illustrations, etc., volume 4 for 1909, contained 513 pages of text and 37 pages of index.

During the fiscal year a new issue of the copyright law was printed.

The new copyright law went into effect on July 1, 1909, superseding the previous copyright statutes, and the changes instituted by the new legislation were of such a character as to render necessary the preparation of new record books and an entirely new set of administrative and explanatory circulars, as well as new application and certificate forms, and report cards for work done, etc. More than 150 new circulars and administrative blanks were printed during the year in editions varying from one thousand to five thousand copies.

Section 25 of the copyright act of March 4, 1909, authorized the Supreme Court to prescribe rules and regulations for practice and procedure in the case of infringement of copyright. Such "Rules for Practice and Procedure" were adopted and promulgated by the Supreme Court of the United States, June 1, 1909, and were printed by the Copyright Office as Circular No. 20.

The new copyright act permitted the introduction and use of new record books of an improved character, securing greater expedition in recording, and greater facility of reference and search. This first year of operation under the new law has demonstrated the administrative advantages secured thereby. It is possible to keep the current business much more closely up to date and to eliminate a larger proportion of uncleared material. The fees applied for the fiscal year under the new law exceeded the one hundred thousand dollar mark, and were nearly twenty-one thousand dollars in excess of the fees for the previous fiscal year. The annual fees have nearly doubled during the last thirteen years, since 1897.

On the other hand, the first year of the new law (as was to be expected) greatly increased the Copyright Office correspondence. The greater part of the business of the Copyright Office is done by correspondence.. The fees, deposits, and applications are almost entirely received through the mails or by express. The total letters and parcels received numbered 153,300 pieces, while the letters, certificates, parcels, etc., dispatched numbered 189,708. Letters received transmitting remittances numbered 45,000, including money orders to the number of 27,505. During the last thirteen fiscal years, the money orders received numbered 301,139.

ACCUMULATED DEPOSITS.

The copyright act going into force on July 1, 1909, provides for the gradual elimination of the accumulated copyright deposits. From time to time as requested articles not needed have been returned to the claimants of copyright. Owing, however, to the pressure of business caused by the new act, without a corresponding increase in the Copyright Office force (requested in the urgent deficiency bill of 1910), the rearranging of these deposits for the purpose of final disposal has had to be postponed. It is now proposed to use the space allotted in the new stack and to proceed with the elimination as rapidly as is practicable.

LEGISLATION.

Notwithstanding a new general consolidated copyright act was approved on March 4, 1909, and went into effect on July 1, 1909, three new copyright bills were introduced during the Sixty-first Congress. The first was presented by the Hon.. Phillip P. Campbell, of Kansas, on July 23, 1909, providing for the suspension of protection when any patent or copyright was owned, used, or leased by any trust or monopoly. The second, by the Hon. George W. Gordon, of Tennessee, presented on May 13, 1910, provides specific damages in the case of infringement of copyright. The third, by the Hon. Andrew J. Peters, of Massachusetts, introduced on June 11, 1910, provides that the sale of a work of art by a foreigner to a citizen of the United States shall operate to permit the purchaser to reproduce the work when not for commercial use or sale.

No action was taken on these bills, other than to refer them to the House Committee on Patents.

It was to be expected that the new law would give rise to some questions of interpretation, and certain provisions of the new legislation have been submitted from time to time to the Attorney-General for his opinion thereon. The full text of these opinions rendered during the year, together with certain decisions of the Treasury Department in regard to importations under the new copyright law, are printed in full as Addendum No. 2 to this report.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT RELATIONS.

The copyright act provides for the publication of Presidential Proclamations in the case of international copyright relations. The question having been raised whether a new copyright proclamation was necessary so far as the reciprocal copyright relations already established with certain foreign nations were concerned, the matter was submitted to the Attorney-General for his opinion. His decision was that a new proclamation should be issued and that such new proclamation might be retroactive in terms and effect. Accordingly a general copyright proclamation declaring reciprocal copyright relations with Austria, Belgium, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, and Switzerland was signed on April 9, 1910, and duly promulgated. A proclamation was also made in behalf of Luxembourg on June 29, 1910.

The Second Pan-American Copyright Convention of 1902 was ratified by the President March 16, 1908, and proclaimed April 9, 1908. It went into effect as between the United States and Guatemala, Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras, and Nicaragua on July 1, 1908.

For some years the International Institute of Bibliography has been collecting materials for international statistics of printed books.

The foundations for international book statistics are found in the various national bibliographies, some of the latter being statistics for past centuries, others current statistics. Also some special international works.

Bibliographies of incunabula (publications prior to 1500) are numerous, enough so to give a figure for this century not far from the correct one.

There also exists in many countries national bibliographies embracing their total respective productions from the beginning. Such are: La Littérature finnoise, 1544-1879; Bibliografia cronologica romana, 1550-1873; Bibliographia Hungariae, 1712-1860; Bibliographie de la littérature bulgare moderne, 1806-70; Serbische Bibliographie, 1741-1867; Naamregister van Nederduitsche Boeken, 1600-1761; Alphabetische Naamlijst van Boeken, 1790-1875; Katalog sämtlicher in der österreichischen Monarchie vom Jahre 1750-1860 erschienenen Bücher; Régi magyar Könivtar, 1531-1711; Bibliografia polska (Bibliographie polonaise d'Estreicher) depuis les origines de l'imprimerie jusqu'à 1893; Bibliographie japonaise depuis le XVe siècle jusqu'à 1859; A list of books printed in Scotland before 1700 . . .; d'Aldis; Biblioteca hispano-chilena, 1523-1817 de Medina, etc.

Current bibliography may be divided into two classes: official and private. In the former class come such publications as La Bibliographie de la Belgique, Bibliografia italiana (and the Catalog of Entries of the U. S. Copyright Office), etc.; in the second class Katalog der im deutschen Buchhandel erchienen; Hinrichs' Funfjarns; Brinkman's Alphabetische Lijst van Boeken; Landkarten (Pays-Bas); Dansk Bogfortegnelse (Danemark); Oesterreichische Bibliographie; Przewodnik bibljograficzny; Arskatalog för Svenska Bokhandeln (Suède); (the Publishers' Circular for Great Britain, and the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for the United States), etc.

There are some countries where publications of neither class exist, and where we must rely on fragmentary statistics. The national bibliographies endeavor to register each year all new publications, but it is a fact that a certain part of all printed books do slip by. On the other hand, the statistics are not always actually national. Germany, for instance, records not only German books, but those of the Austrian provinces, Switzerland and other countries where German is used. Despite such duplication and inflation, the various national bibliographies must be the basis of all international book statistics.

The official and private records of each country rarely accord; each has lacunae that the other fills. Compare, for instance, the French book production as recorded by the legal depository (a) and as by the Bibliographie de la France (b):

	a	b		a	b
1899	12.985	10.199	1904	12.139	9.488
1900	13 362	10.004	1905	12.416	9.644
1901	13.053	10.133	1906	10.898	8.725
1902	12.199	9.542	1907	10.785	8.664
1903	12.264	9.653	1908	11.073	8.799

Still greater is the difference between the figures of the United States Copyright Office and THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

Register of Copyrights.		Publishers' Weekly.
1905-6.....	15,504	1906.....	7,139
1906-7.....	16,651	1907.....	9,620
1907-8.....	not sep.	1908.....	9,821
1908-9.....	"	1909.....	10,725
1909-10.....	24,740	1910.....	13,470

Accessions to national libraries, on the other hand, considered as statistical sources, have even less value than the copyright reports. The figures of the Bibliotheque Nationale of Switzerland, for instance, which include under one heading books, pamphlets, periodicals, maps and portraits, are practically unusable.

*Summary of a Report Presented in the Name of the International Institute of Bibliography to the International Congress on Bibliography and Documention by M. M. B. Iwinski.

From all these various sources it is possible to obtain an approximate figure, though one still very incomplete, of world book production from the invention of printing to the present day. Statistics for the 15th century and for the last thirty years of the 19th century are fairly complete. The statistics for the centuries between must be very largely a matter of mathematical computation, with occasional exact figures which may be used to check the results gained:

Periods.	Books Published.
1436-1500	30,742
1500-1600	285,824
1600-1700	972,300
1700-1800	1,637,196
1800-1900	6,100,527
1900-1908	1,395,552

It goes without saying that international statistics can be no more exact than the national statistics upon which they are based. The greatest defect of national statistics is the absence of unity, the basis of all statistical information. Certain statistics include books, others books and pamphlets, still others books, pamphlets and periodicals. There is no homogeneity in the totals presented.

How great this diversity of statistical basis is may be gained at a glance by comparing the book outputs of the various publishing countries for three typical years, 1887, 1898 and 1908, as given by their reported statistics, and then noting their probable actual book production as well as the latter may be estimated.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE STATIONERS' BOARD OF TRADE.

At the annual meeting of the Stationers' Board of Trade, held Tuesday, January 3, 1911, the president read his address, and the treasurer's report and that of the Executive Committee were read. The following trustees were elected for the ensuing year: James C. Aikin, of Aikin, Lambert Co.; Thomas P. Bacon, of J. B. Lippincott Co.; Henry C. Bainbridge, of Charles T. Bainbridge's Sons; Arthur C. Bainbridge, of Hy. Bainbridge & Co.; Wm. B. Boorum, Jr., of Boorum & Pease Co.; Eberhard Faber, of Eberhard Faber; Stephen Farrelly, of American News Co.; Wm. A. Gray, of Berlin & Jones Envelope Co.; Wm. B. Hadley, of Cassell & Co., Ltd.; Wm. O. Huston, of Dennison Mfg. Co.; Arthur P. Jackson, of Hawkes-Jackson Co.; Henry R. Jackson, of Spencerian Pen Co.; Charles S. Kiggins, of Kiggins & Tooker Co.; Charles F. Kimpton, of Kimpton, Harbottle & Haupt; Frederick P. Seymour, of L. E. Waterman Co.; David A. Tower, of Tower Mfg. & Novelty Co.; Samuel E. Vernon, of S. E. & M. Vernon; Franklin Weston, of Byron Weston Co.

The president's address, treasurer's report and Executive Committee's report follow.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Gentlemen of The Stationers' Board of Trade.

This is the thirty-sixth annual meeting of this organization, and I am pleased to submit to you this report of the work performed during the past year under the supervision of your officers and Board of Trustees. I trust that the results shown and the services rendered have been such as to merit your commendation.

The treasurer's report shows a balance of $5236.13, an excess of $273.44 in receipts over expenses during the year, and no debts beyond current expenses. While we have accumulated a very comfortable balance, our expenses so nearly balance our receipts that I have not advised any decrease in dues.

Information Department.—Shows that it has been used to about the same extent as last year, although not quite as extensively. We have furnished various members 245 reports in excess of the limit of 200 per year.

Collection Department.—The Executive Committee's report shows that we have received during the year 3632 claims, aggregating $183,937.81, which shows an increase of 513 more claims than last year.

We would again call members' attention to the demand notices for collecting claims, which we sell for only 40 cents per hundred, and those that have used them find it a desirable and inexpensive means of collecting past due claims direct, without paying a fee to the Board. If you have not used it, kindly give it a trial.

We also recommend the draft system to those who have not used it, as an effective means for collecting claims at a very small expense when draft is paid to the bank.

Bankruptcy Department.—Shows it has been of great assistance to members in realizing upon their claims, as there has been paid through this department $38,794.32, which is an increase of about $8000 over the previous year.

There have been 11,246 letters received and 13,844 written, also 12,183 circulars sent to creditors. We trust that members will not fail to make use of this department, as well as the Collection Department, when opportunity presents itself, for the more claims we receive in bankruptcy and failure cases, the more apt we are to accomplish good results. Particularly so in bankruptcy cases, when we can control matters by electing a desirable trustee, in the interest of the creditors.

Our secretary has had large experience in handling bankruptcy, failure and adjustment cases, and when it is necessary for him in the interest of the creditors to investigate the matter personally by proceeding to the locality where the failure has taken place he is ready at all times to immediately proceed to same for the purpose of investigating the failure and ascertaining the best action to take in the premises.

Through the Collection and Bankruptcy Departments there has been collected and disbursed $102,101.19, and there was also paid direct to members $58,000, making a total paid of $160,101.19.

During the year death has removed from our midst Francis Wood, president of the Esterbrook Steel Pen Manufacturing Co.; Richard Esterbrook, assistant secretary of the Esterbrook Steel Pen Manufacturing Co.; Charles H. Mann, president of the William Mann Company, and Henry Lindenmeyr, member of the firm of Henry Lindenmeyr & Sons.

The books and accounts have been examined by our accountant, Frank Broaker, and found correct.

I had the pleasure of representing this Board at the sixth annual convention of the National Association of Stationers and Manufacturers, held in Baltimore in October last. This association is in successful operation, and is fast becoming of great benefit to its members, and merits the good will and hearty support of the trade.

Their next convention meets in Buffalo, N. Y.

Your Dinner Committee have arranged to hold the annual dinner at the Hotel Plaza on March 21, and are busily engaged upon the details of the affair. I hope we shall have a large representation of our members, beginning with the head of the house.

In closing I want to extend to my fellow members on the Board and to the office force and the membership generally my sincere thanks for the generous support they have given. In comparison my salary sinks into absolute insignificance.

Yours respectfully,

HENRY C. BAINBRIDGE, President.

This is to certify that I have examined the books of account for the Stationers' Board of Trade for the period ending November 30, 1910, together with all vouchers for expenditures, and find same to have been correctly kept and expenditures properly vouchered.

The receipts and expenditures are correctly set forth in the income and expenditure account, and the balance sheet (subject to the accuracy of the collection and estate departmental accounts) correctly represents the financial condition of the Association as at November 30, 1910.

FRANK BROAKER.
Certified Public Accountant No. 1, State of New York.

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Mr. President and Members of the Stationers' Board of Trade.

As chairman of the Executive Committee of the Stationers' Board of Trade, I take pleasure in submitting the following report for the year ending November 30, 1910:

BUREAU OF INFORMATION.

The reports on file in this department to December 1, 1910, number 94,993. At the present time we have revised reports of the standing and credit of 77,825 dealers, of which 2579 are new names received during the year.

From December 1, 1909, to November 30, 1910, we have furnished to members 18,044 reports, as against 19,044 reports during the previous year.

INFORMATION (REPORTS) APPLIED FOR.

	1909	1910
Inquiries of Correspondents.....	7146	6835
Requests of Dealers for Statements....	5809	5317

INFORMATION (REPORTS) RECEIVED.

Reports from Correspondents.....	7375	6697
Statements Received.....	3354	2994

During the past year we sent to members for information 6462 inquiries. The previous year 6751 inquiries were sent. Letters written 1040, as against 1023 during the previous year. Weekly circulars issued from this department during the year were 6300. In addition to which there was also issued 300 special circulars.

This department was used in 1909 by 110 members; in the past year by 108.

Various members have obtained 245 reports in excess of the limit of 200 per year.

COLLECTION DEPARTMENT.

In the Collection Department there have been received for collection during the year 3632 claims, aggregating $183,937.81.

Collections to the amount of $58,369.87 have been made through the office, and nearly $58,000 was paid direct to members as the result of notice from the office and attorneys.

2104 claims have been closed by collection through the office, by attorneys, or paid direct to members.

3103 claims were sent to attorneys during the year.

1176 claims amounting to $57,234.98 were settled direct.

684 claims were settled through attorneys.

244 claims were settled through the office.

458 claims were returned uncollectable.

221 claims transferred to the Bankruptcy Department.

849 claims are still open and in process of collection.

2783 claim have been disposed of.

There have been received 18,599 letters and 35,145 written.

There have been received during the year 504 drafts which are included in the number of claims received, aggregating $34,672.54, of which 106 have been collected, amounting to $4937. The remaining 493 unpaid drafts were turned over to attorneys for collection.

BANKRUPTCY DEPARTMENT.

During the year 453 new cases, 1246 new claims, aggregating $141,050.03, were entered in this department. 18 cases, including 18 claims, aggregating $780.66, settled in full. 232 cases, including 666 claims, aggregating $87,535.04, settled by compromise, or through the bankruptcy court. Two cases, including 20 claims aggregating $1416.69, were settled by notes; 5 cases, including 6 claims aggregating $558.65, were settled by return of goods; 3 cases, including 3 claims aggregating $167.99, were withdrawn; 136 cases, including 306 claims aggregating $25,900.15, closed as worthless.

There has been paid during the year to creditors through this department proceeds of $38,794.32.

11,246 letters were received and 13,844 written, and 12,182 circulars were sent out. In addition to the letters and circulars above mentioned there have been 457 general letters received and 270 general letters written.

Through the concentration of claims this department succeeded in having a compromise offer in one particular case increased from 35 to 100 per cent., which in one instance shows the result of united effort.

Through the Collection and Bankruptcy Departments there has been collected and disbursed $102,101.19, and there was also paid direct to members $58,000, making a total paid of $160,191.19.

The books have been audited monthly and bills have been passed and paid regularly each month; besides the accountant for the Board, Frank Broaker, has audited the books to December 1 last, and according to the certified report as rendered by him they were found correct.

The year ended with a balance of $8597.22 in the treasurer's hands. This amount, less the redemption and dinner fund accounts and estate receipts undistributed, leaves the amount at the disposal of the treasurer $5236.13.

Your Executive Committee earnestly requests the hearty co-operation of all the members in increasing the usefulness of the Board and enlarging its membership, so that the year 1911 will make a better showing than any previous year.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES C. AIKEN,
Chairman Executive Committee.

AT the first regular monthly meeting of the new Board of Trustees of the Stationers' Board of Trade, held on the 10th inst., the election for officers and appointment of committees resulted as follows: Henry C. Bainbridge was unanimously re-elected president; Stephen Farelly was unanimouly elected 1st vice-president, succeeding James C. Aikin; Frederick P. Seymour was unanimously elected 2d vice-president, succeeding Charles S. Kiggins, Messrs. Aikin and Kiggins retiring from the office of 1st and 2d vice-presidents respectively at their own requests, after long and efficient service. They still, however, remain members of the Board of Trustees.. Herbert M. Condit was unanimously re-elected secretary-treasurer. Executive Committee: Stephen Farrelly, chairman; Frederick P. Seymour, Arthur P. Jackson, William B. Hadley, Charles F. Kimpton, the president ex-officio, the secretary-treasurer ex-officio. Arbitration Committee: Frederick P. Seymour, chairman; Franklin Weston, David A. Tower, Stephen Farrelly, Arthur C. Bainbridge, Henry R. Jackson, the president ex-officio. Louis V. Blanchet, of Berlin & Jones Envelope Co., was elected trustee in place of William A. Gray.

BEST SELLERS OF 1910.

THE year 1910, says the Bookman, in its review of the best sellers of the year past, has been respectable, but in no way remarkable. In fact, it has been just a good, average year. The last month of 1909 showed Rex Beach's "The Silver Horde" in first place, followed by George Barr McCutcheon's "Truxton King." Then came William Allen White's "A Certain Rich Man," Harold McGrath's "The Goose Girl," Robert W. Chambers's "The Danger Mark," and Robert Hichens's "Bella Donna." Entirely a man's list. But the January list was a little more chivalrous. Thomas Nelson Page's "John Marvel, Assistant" was the first with 195 points, and the books by Mr. Hichens, Mr. McCutcheon and Mr. Beach respectively second, third and fourth, and fifth, with Mr. De Morgan's "It Never Can Happen Again" sixth, but "Little Sister Snow" was third, and Mrs. Rinehart's "When a Man Marries" fifth. In the lists of the February number, Ralph Connor's "The Foreigner" held first place with 223 points, followed by "Little Sister Snow," "John Marvel," "When a Man Marries," "Truxton King" and "The Silver Horde."

The March list brought some decided changes. Mrs. Rinehart's "When a Man Marries" held first place by a lead of 142 points. "The Foreigner," the leader of the previous month, was second, and "John Marvel, Assistant," third. Two new books, "Lord Loveland Discovers America," by the Williamsons, and "Passers-By," by Partridge, were fourth and fifth. Tied for sixth place, with 100 points each, were "The Silver Horde" and "Truxton King." The contenders in the February lists were well eliminated by the time the April lists were printed. Only "When a Man Marries," which occupied third place, remained. In the lead was "The Kingdom of Slender Swords," followed by "Lord Loveland Discovers America." "The Man Outside" was fourth, "Passers-By" fifth, and "The Calling of Dan Matthews" sixth. Although "The Kingdom of Slender Swords" was still the leader in May the lists showed some radical changes. Gertrude Atherton's "Tower of Ivory" was second, and "The House of the Whispering Pines" third. In fourth place was Florence Barclay's "The Rosary," a book destined to enjoy a rather enduring popularity. Fifth was "Lord Loveland Discovers America," and sixth David Graham Phillips's "White Magic."

A new book by Winston Churchill had appeared, and in the June list it was not surprising to find "A Modern Chronicle" the leader with a total of 382 points. To indicate the immense advantage Mr. Churchill's book had over its competitors it is necessary only to say that the point total of the second book, "White Magic," was 95. "The Rosary" was third, and Mrs. Humphry Ward's "Lady Merton, Colonist," fourth. Tied for fifth and sixth places were Octave Thanet's "By Inheritance" and "The Kingdom of Slender Swords." In July "A Modern Chronicle" was again first with 303 points. The success of "The Inner Shrine" the previous year had apparently not been forgotten, for "The Wild Olive," by the same anonymous author, was second with 176 points. "The Rosary" was third, E. Phillips Oppenheim's "The Illustrious Prince" fourth, "Lady Merton, Colonist," fifth, and "The Man Higher Up" sixth. The July order was reversed in August, for "The Wild Olive" had passed "A Modern Chronicle," and held the lead with 274 points as against 232 points for the Churchill book. For the third successive month "The Rosary" was in third place. The other positions on the list were held by new books: MacGrath's "A Splendid Hazard," Locke's "Simon the Jester," and Watt's "Nathan Burke."

In the September lists "The Wild Olive" was again first. "The Rosary," which had been growing steadily stronger, was second, and "Simon the Jester" third. "A Modern Chronicle" had dropped to fourth place. Fifth and sixth were "A Splendid Hazard" and "Nathan Burke." In October "The Rosary" appeared for the sixth consecutive time in the list, and this time it occupied first place with 281 points. Second was "The Wild Olive," third "Simon the Jester," fourth "The Window at the White Cat," fifth "Nathan Burke," and sixth "A Modern Chronicle," which seemed to have run its course. In November it was again "The Rosary," first, followed by Mrs. Rinehart's "The Window at the White Cat." New books by Robert W. Chambers and George Barr McCutcheon, "Ailsa Paige" and "The Rose in the Ring" held third and fourth places respectively. Mrs. Thurston's "Max" was fifth and "The Wild Olive" sixth. The last month of 1910 showed "The Rosary" again in the lead, closely followed by "Max." Mr. McCutcheon's "The Rose in the Ring" was third, and another book by Florence Barclay, "The Mistress of Shenstone," fourth. In fifth and sixth places respectively were "The Window at the White Cat" and Eleanor Hallowell Abbott's "Molly Make-Believe."

Five Times Mentioned

A Modern Chronicle, The Wild Olive.

Four Times Mentioned

When a Man Marries.

Three Times Mentioned

John Marvel, Assistant, Truxton King, The Silver Horde, Lord Loveland Discovers America, The Kingdom of Slender Swords, Simon the Jester, Nathan Burke, The Window at the White Cat.

Twice Mentioned

Little Sister Snow, The Foreigner, Passers-By, White Magic, Lady Merton, Colonist, A Splendid Hazard, The Rose in the Ring, Max.

Once Mentioned

Bella Donna, It Never Can Happen Again, The Man Outside, The Calling of Dan Matthews, Tower of Ivory, The House of the Whispering Pines, By Inheritance, The Illustrious Prince, The Man Higher Up, Ailsa Paige, The Mistress of Shenstone, Molly Make-Believe.

In the lists for 1910 thirty-two books were represented as against twenty-nine for 1909, thirty-six in 1908, thirty in 1907, thirty in 1906, twenty-nine in 1905, thirty-one in 1904, thirty-two in 1903, twenty-eight in 1902, twenty-nine in 1901 and twenty-nine in 1900. Of the thirty-two books of 1910 one, "The Wild Olive," was published anonymously, and one, "Lord Loveland Discovers America," was the result of a collaboration. Of the thirty-two known authors thus represented (including Mr. and Mrs. Williamson) eighteen were men and fourteen women. Eight and a half of the books are of foreign authorship, the half representing the English part of the Williamson collaboration.

ENGLISH BOOK SALES OF 1910.

It is a sign of the times that the five most important sales of books held during the year which has just drawn to its close should have been of a miscellaneous character, that is to say, made up of volumes gathered from a variety of sources. To argue from this and similar instances in the past that there are no large and important libraries left in private hands would be absurd, even if it were not known that the contrary is the case; but there is little doubt, nevertheless, that the practice of book collectors, apart altogether from their inclinations, is very different from what it once was. The massing together of large quantities of books with the object of forming a library of a general character capable of affording information on most topics is almost entirely a thing of the past, and what may be called fashionable books have now become so expensive that to obtain any considerable number of them is entirely out of the question for the vast majority of those who—to borrow a word used by Evelyn—set about "erecting" a library.

Most modern book collectors are specialists who seldom expect the results of their activities to outlast them for long, and in that they are rarely mistaken. It is not often that one sees an ancestral library in the making, or any collection of books that does not look doomed. There is no necessity to trace the steps which lead to the inevitable end—it is enough to say that this sufficiently explains why most collections of books sold by auction nowadays come from many sources rather than from one. There are, of course, exceptions, but they so rapidly diminish as time goes on that to see a library sold which has existed intact even for such a comparatively short space of time as two generations is most unusual. The Ashburnham Library—extensive and important as it was—existed but little longer than eighty years, and it was very old in the light of everyday experience.

The present tendency, then, is to be satisfied with little, whatever its quality may be, and most of the sales which took place last year prove this to be so. The most important of them all was held by Messrs. Sotheby, on July 21 and following day, and realized £7559. Some of the books, exceedingly good of their kind, but few in number, belonged to Mr. Ruston, of Lincoln; all the rest were "other properties," and these included the books bought in at Bishop Gott's sale two years ago, among them being the four Shakespearean folios withdrawn at £3850, and afterwards sold for sums of £1800, £210, £850 and £76, respectively—this disparity causing one critic to remark, somewhat irreverently, at the time, that a "slump in Shakespeares" had set in.

Most of the sales held during the year point a similar moral. The library of J. W. Ford, of Winchmore Hill, was an exception. Two portions of this extensive collection had already been sold, one in 1902 and the other in 1904, and another instalment is apparently yet to come. This was a very large library, catalogued, so far, in 2523 "lots," realizing rather more than £10,000. Robert Hovenden's library, sold by Puttick & Simpson in February, was also of an exceptional character, consisting almost entirely of genealogical and archæological works. This, with some Americana added, fetched very nearly £3000, as also did the late Thomas Gray's library sold at Messrs. Sotheby's in June. Then we have the Britwell Court Library (£1085); the Radway Grange Library (£779); the final portion of the Earl of Sheffield's collection (£991), the first part having been sold for £3223 in November, 1907; and the libraries of Elliot Stock (£639), Alfred Trapnell (£963), the late T. W. Waller (£1447), the late Dr. George Watson (£413), and the late W. H. Hilton (£3480). These sales, all of which—with one exception—were held at Messrs. Sotheby's, were of single libraries; about sixty other sales held at Wellington Street and elsewhere were of a composite character, and in many instances of greater importance. That is the position as it is to-day, and moreover it is found on analysis that books may now be divided into three main classes so far as their selling properties are concerned. First come those which are exceedingly rare and very much sought for; next, those for which there is a steady demand by reason of their coming within certain classes of literature; and thirdly, those of a medium character such as are met with on numerous occasions. Books belonging to the first class have a tendency to advance in price, owing to keen competition and the fact that the few available copies are being slowly but surely absorbed by the large libraries of Europe and the United States; those belonging to the second class about hold their own; while those belonging to the third have of late fallen away to a very considerable extent, and are much cheaper now than they were a few years ago.

The vast majority of the books sold during the year belonged to the third class above mentioned, and the general effect of this activity may be seen at a glance by the simple process of comparing the results with others which are available. Between January and December more than 70 important sales were held in London, the total amount realized being considerably less than £100,000 for about 40,000 "lots." This discloses an average of about £2 9s., the smallest for ten years, and very much smaller than that for 1907, when an unusually large number of very important and valuable books raised it to £4 4s., the highest since 1893, and, apparently, during recent times. This much-reduced average suggests that not only did fewer expensive books come into the market during the year just closed but also that the value of medium-class books fell during the period in question. That was undoubtedly the case—though why it should be so raises a question not easy to determine. Whatever the answer may be, the book sales held during the year have, as a rule, been in favor of buyers, who in their turn find themselves affected by the prevailing adverse conditions, so it must not be assumed that when the buyers are booksellers—as they generally are—they necessarily gain largely, or indeed at all, by the depreciation, and are consequently glad of it. That would seem to depend upon the kind or class of books under review—whether they are readily resaleable, and upon a consideration of the position as a whole, which, according to all accounts, has not been very favorable of late. It would be safer to assert that private buyers have, as a result of the year's sales, nothing to complain of, and that is apparent enough in many isolated instances as well as on a comprehensive review of the market.

On January 13 and following day Puttick & Simpson held the first sale of the year, but there is not much to chronicle, and the same may be said of that of January 26, when Mrs. Hartmann's library was sold by Messrs. Christie. In the latter collection there was a fine copy of the "Biblia Sacra Latina," 1475, folio, the first Bible printed at Venice, and this realized £99 15s. (oak boards, covered with velvet), and an equally fine example of "La Divina Commedia," printed in 1484, folio, also at Venice, £22 (morocco extra). On January 26 Messrs. Hodgson sold a number of important books, among them Philip van Marnix's Chronicle, printed by Anthony de Solempne, the first Norwich printer, 1579, 12mo, £19 (vellum, some head-lines cut); Dresser and Sharpe's "History of the Birds of Europe," in 84 parts, with the title-pages and Supplement, £41; a run of Cobbett and Hansard's "Parliamentary Debates" in 678 vols., 1806-1909, £121 (half-russia, cloth and boards); and a very scarce Masque variously attributed to Ben Jonson, Thomas Lodge and T. Jones, entitled "Luminalia, or the Festival of Light," 1637, small 4to, £13 (sheep). The Radway Grange Library sold by Messrs. Sotheby on February 1 was chiefly remarkable for a collection of 27 maps and plans relating to Canada and the United States, published between 1775 and 1781, bound up in a folio volume. This realized £84, while the first edition of Beaumont and Fletcher's "Comedies and Tragedies," 1647, and the first edition of "The Wild-Goose Chase," 1652, bound together, fetched £36. Hennepin's "New Discovery of a Vast Country in America," 1699, 8vo, realized £15 (old calf, a plate torn). The first edition of Aiken's "National Sports of Great Britain," 1821, folio, has been increasing in value for some time, and a good copy sold for as much as £70 (morocco, gilt edges) on February 3 at Messrs. Sotheby's, precisely the same amount being obtained for another copy, bound in the same way, on March 21. Colored plates of military costumes are also increasing in value, and £56 was paid for a series of 51 plates of this character published by Spooner between 1833 and 1836, notwithstanding the fact that they had been cut round and mounted on brown paper.

Robert Hovenden's library and the "Americana" sold on February 7 and three following days realized, as stated, nearly £3000, but this was a large collection, and the prices were very evenly distributed. The collection of "Americana" was of comparatively little importance. A French-Huron Lexicon, comprising 270 manuscript pages, by Father Chaumonot, Jesuit missionary to the Huron tribe, was bought in at £190, but appeared again two months later, when the price dropped to £60. Another collection of "Americana," once belonging, partly at least, to Christopher Marshall, known as "The Fighting Quaker," sold at Messrs. Sotheby's on February 14, was also unimportant, and realized only £322. The largest amount obtained was £14 5s. for William Smith's "History of the Province of New York," 1757, 4to (half calf). On February 17 Smollett's "History and Adventures of an Atom," 2 vols., 1749 (for 1796), in the original mottled boards (backed), the edges entirely uncut, fetched £63; and Evelyn's "Silva," 2 vols., bound together, 1786, 4to, £23 (old morocco, a view of Wotton painted on the fore-edge).

At the sale of the Britwell Court Library, already alluded to, Dryden's "To My Lord Chancellor, presented on New Year's Day," 1662, folio, fetched £15 10s. (unbound). This is an unusual price, and the same remark applies to Gay's "Wine—a Poem," a pamphlet of 8 leaves, published in 1708, £19 5s. (unbound), and the same author's "Epistle to her Grace Henrietta, Duchess of Marlborough," 1722, folio, £31 10s. (unbound). It is seldom indeed that an unopened copy of the first edition of Milton's "Areopagitica," 1644, 4to, is met with, but one almost in that state realized £63 at this sale; and several pieces by Waller also sold for substantial amounts. These were "A Poem on St. James's Park," 1661, folio, £11 (unbound, stained); "Instructions to a Painter," 1666, folio, £5 (unbound); and "To the King upon His Majesties Happy Return," first edition, n.d. (1660), and a later edition published in the same year, £13 (sewn together). On February 24 Shelley's "Address to the Irish People," a very badly printed pamphlet published in Dublin in 1812, at 5d., brought £75 (unbound); and on the first day of March the remaining portion of the late Earl of Sheffield's library realized £991. The attraction here consisted of a specially prepared presentation copy of Gibbon's "Decline and Fall," 6 vols., 1777-88, with inscription in the author's autograph, £60 (morocco extra), and Gibbon's "Pocket Diary" for 1776, with numerous entries in his autograph, £38. Sir Walter Gilbey's collection of sporting books sold by Knight, Frank & Rutley on March 9. At this sale a full set of The Sporting Magazine, bound in half calf, with Sir Walter's Index, made £378; The New Sporting Magazine, 30 vols., 1831-46, with additional Index, £194 5s.; The Sporting Review, 15 vols., 1839-46, £44 2s.; and The Annals of Sporting and Fancy Gazette, complete in 13 vols., with the scarce No. 78 for June, 1828, £73 10s.

The remaining sales held during March were all of a miscellaneous character, that of the 21st and 23d being one of the most important of the year. It was catalogued by Messrs. Sotheby in 662 lots, and the total amount realized was £5318. A hitherto unknown edition of Bacon's "History of Henry VII.," printed by Haviland in 1628, folio, fetched £6 5s. (original calf); Blake's "Poetical Sketches," 1783, 8 vols., formerly Heber's copy, £52 (old morocco extra); the artist's working cabinet, containing his tools £30 10s., a small price for such an interesting relic, one would think; Cervantes' "Don Quixote," second issue of the first edition of the first volume, and first edition of the second, together 2 vols., 4to, 1605-15, £250 (old vellum and old calf); Charles I.'s own copy of the Book of Common Prayer, 1634, folio, £60 (old morocco); Eliot's "Indian Grammar Begun," 1666, 4to, £200 (morocco, some leaves repaired); the editio princeps of Homer, 1488, folio, £245 (morocco); two tracts of the "Anti-Bossicon," by William Lilly, the grammarian, printed by Pynson in 1521, with some other pieces in the same volume, £125 (Cambridge binding by Garret Godfrey); Catherine of Aragon's copy of the "Textus Magistri Sententiarum," printed by Berthelet in 1527, small 4to, £55 (leather, arms of Henry VIII. and the Queen); a large-paper copy of Nichols's "History of Leicestershire," 4 vols. in 8, 1795-1815, folio, £96 (original half calf); and a copy of the first edition of FitzGerald's "Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám," with a misprint corrected in his own hand, 1859, 4to, £51 (wrapper, quite clean). Other notable books sold on the same occasion comprised the rarest of the early issues of the first Prayer Book of Edward VI., printed by Grafton in June, 1549, £70 (original calf); Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein," 3 vols., 1818, with corrections in her hand, £35 (old calf); Watteau's "Figures de Différents Caractères," 2 vols., c. 1735-40, folio, £131 (old russia); the first edition of the New Testament in Welsh, 1567, 4to, £180 (morocco extra); and Williams's "Key into the Language of America," 1643, 12mo, £94 (original calf). The last-named work supplies many interesting particulars of the manners and customs of the Massachusetts and neighboring Indians, and is the earliest printed attempt to give the language of the aborigines of New England a literary form. The previous copy sold fetched £50 in June, 1905 (original sheep).

Early in April another book, or rather pamphlet of 11 pages, of American interest sold for £13 (unbound). This was the "Surprising Account of the Captivity and Escape of Philip McDonald and Alexander McLeod of Virginia from the Chickkemogga Indians," printed at Keene, New Hampshire, in 1794, small 8vo. Shelley's "St. Irvyne," 1811, 8vo, realized £28 (morocco extra) at the same sale; and Alfred Trapnell's library, sold on the 6th, contained many good books, e.g., the editio princeps of the "Vitæ et Sententiæ" of Diogenes Laertius, printed by Jensen of Venice in 1475, folio, £18 (oak boards).

The libraries of S. Middleton, of Dublin, and the Baroness von Colberg of Rome, with other properties, sold at Messrs. Sotheby's on the 13th and following day, contained a copy of Dionis Gray's "Storehouse of Brevetie in Woorkes of Arithemeticke," 1577, 12mo, £5 5s. (original calf, stained); Shakespeare's Works and Poems, the first illustrated edition, 7 vols., 1709-10, 8vo, £13 (original calf). The late Sir Seymour Haden's "Études à l'Eau-forte," consisting of 25 etchings on China paper, with the plate of Fulham in two states, and 5 culs-de-lampe, 1866, realized £173 5s.; and a little later in the month Gould's "Birds of New Guinea," 5 vols., 1875-88, fetched £39 (half morocco); the "Birds of Great Britain," 5 vols., 1873, £34 (half morocco); the Kelmscott edition of Chaucer's Works, 1896, folio, £60 (white pigskin, metal clasps).

On April 25 Messrs. Sotheby sold for £8650 the correspondence chiefly addressed to W. Blathwayt, Secretary of State and Commissioner for Trade and Plantations, concerning the American Colonies during the last quarter of the seventeenth century. It included, inter alia, the original draft of the grant made by Charles II. of the Province of Pennsylvania to William Penn, dated March 4, 1681. At the same time a collection of 13 manuscripts and 35 maps of the North American Colonies, c. 1670-90, realized £690, and an extensive collection of documents and pamphlets on the state of the North American and West Indian Colonies in the later years of William III., £300. A few days later at Messrs. Hodgson's the first edition of the Complutensian Polyglot, as it is called, or Biblia Sacra Polyglotta of Cardinal Ximenez, the earliest of the four standard texts of the Septuagint Greek version, 6 vols., folio, 1514-17, fetched £59 (calf, three leaves repaired)—the Amherst copy sold for £110 (old calf) in December, 1908; Blake's "Songs of Innocence," 1789, with two colored plates from "Songs of Experience" (1794), an early copy before the numbering of the plates, £47 (old russia); Gardiner's "History of England," 17 vols., 1863-1903, £24 10s. (original cloth); "The Vicar of Wakefield," the first or Salisbury edition, 2 vols., 1766, 8vo, £67 (old calf); Keats's "Lamia," 1820, 8vo, £42 (original boards, with label); the Second Folio of Shakespeare's Plays, 1632, £60 (morocco extra, verses mounted, title and last leaf repaired).

The remainder of April was productive of very little. Two black-letter proclamations of Cromwell prohibiting horse racing sold for £5 and £13 respectively; Colonna's "Hypnerotomachia Poliphili," 1499, folio, from the Sardou library, £28 10s. (morocco); and a special copy of the "Eikon Basilike," 1648, for £51. This had formerly been the property of Charles II.

The month of May witnessed the sale of the libraries of the late Montagu Guest of the Albany, Marion Crawford the novelist, Joseph Thompson of Wilmslow, Cheshire, and the late Professor A. J. Butler, as well as a further portion of J. W. Ford's library, and several miscellaneous collections. Mr. Guest's library was useful rather than valuable, as also was that of Marion Crawford; indeed, it is not until we come to Mr. Thompson's collection that we find anything specially noticeable. In this was an extensive series of works relating to the Brownists, which, however, did not realize very much. Dresser's "Birds of Europe," 8 vols., 1871-81, £36 (uncut); Elliot's "Monograph of the Phasianidæ," 2 vols. in 6 parts, 1870-72, £47; a fine series of Gould's ornithological works, £370; Lord Lilford's "Birds of the British Islands," 7 vols., 1885-1897, 8 vo, £47 (half morocco); and Nash's "Mansions of England," the 4 series, 1839-49, £30 (in portfolios). The original issue of Alken's "National Sports of Great Britain," 1821, folio, sold for £52 (half calf) on May 25, and a series of original editions of Mr. Hardy's novels fetched varying amounts, of which the highest were £17 15s. for "Desperate Remedies," 3 vols., 1871, and £5 12s. 6d. for "Far from the Madding Crowd," 2 vols., 1874, both being in cloth as published.

The further portion of Mr. Ford's library was catalogued in 1239 lots, and realized £3160. This very fine collection of an all-round character included "Jane Eyre," 3 vols., Smith & Elder, 1847, £28 (original cloth); "Wuthering Heights," 3 vols., 1847, £48 (original cloth); the "Dictionary of National Biography," 67 vols., 1885-1904, £25 10s. (cloth); Dugdale's "History of Embanking and Drayning," with the 5 scarce leaves following the preface, "To the Reader," 1662, folio, £41 (morocco, gilt edges, by Roger Payne); Fuller's "Worthies of England," 1662, folio, £110 (old russia, also by Roger Payne, with one of his characteristic memoranda inserted); and White's "Natural History of Selborne," 1789, 4to, £20 (morocco super-extra).

AMERICAN AUCTION SALES, 1910

THE auction season in America began on September 14-15 with a sale held by C. F. Libbie & Co., in Boston. As usual, the early sales include few items of more than nominal value; the auctioneers do not ordinarily sell any first class collections until well along in October.

On October 28-29 the Anderson Auction Co. sold the library of the late Wilhelmus Mynderse, of Brooklyn. Included in this collection was one of the most extensive series of first editions of Thackeray which has been seen in this country for a long time. The highest priced item was a copy of Thackeray's "Flore et Zephyr," which brought $700. This copy formerly belonged to the late Augustin Daly, and in his sale in 1900 sold for $420. The plates had all been cut round and mounted.

The second part of the J. Chester Chamberlain collection of first editions was sold by the same firm on November 4-5. This included Mr. Chamberlain's collections of the works of Aldrich, Cooper, Halleck, Irving, D. G. Mitchell, Stedman and Whitman, as well as duplicates of a number of first editions of Longfellow, Lowell, Bryant and others of the more famous authors, the larger collections of which had been sold in February, 1909.

Another notable sale of first editions of American authors was the library of Frank Maier, sold by the Anderson Auction Co. in two parts on November 16-17 and 22-23. Very full series of the great American writers were included, as well as first editions of a number of minor or less prolific authors. The sale was most notable for the very high price of $3800 which was paid for a copy of No. 1 of a contemplated series of the prose romances of Edgar Allan Poe. This number, which contained "The Murders in the Rue Morgue" and "The Man That Was Used Up," was published in Philadelphia in 1843 at the price of twelve and a half cents. A copy of Poe's second book, "Al Aaraaf, Tamerlane, and Minor Poems," 1829, with a presentation inscription by Poe addressed to his cousin Elizabeth, and with numerous alterations made by him apparently for the New York edition of 1845, brought $2900. This identical book sold in the Pierce sale in Philadelphia in May, 1903, for $1825, and ten years earlier in the Moore sale for $75.

A famous Philadelphia library, that of the late Clarence H. Clark, was sold by Stan. V. Henkels in Philadelphia, the first part on November 30, and the other two parts at a later date. In this sale $2465 was paid for Mr. Clark's magnificent extra-illustrated set of Motley's Works, extended from 9 to 29 volumes, and $4400 for a special copy, extra-illustrated, of the "Memoires du Comte de Crammont," by Anthony Hamilton.

The library of Louis I. Haber, a well-known New York collector, was sold in three parts by the Anderson Auction Co. on December 1-2, 7-8 and 9-10. This was a genuine private collection and the sale attracted great interest. The most notable single item was a letter of John Keats written to his brother George in 1819, 28 pages, quarto. This brought $2500. Another high price, $1775, was paid for Thackeray's autograph manuscript of No. XI., of the "Roundabout Papers," 20 pages, signed.

A sale which made new records on many important books was that of the Amor L. Hollingsworth library, sold in Boston by C. F. Libbie & Co. on April 12, 13 and 14. The collection was quite general in its scope, and included rare books in English literature, Americana, and eighteenth century French books, as well as limited editions and fine bindings. In some respects this was the most notable collection dispersed during the season.

The Edward Everett Hale library, the library of Charles M. Wallace, of Richmond, Va., and the collection of first editions formed by William A. Gramer were among the more important sales held by the Merwin-Clayton Sales Co.

At the head of modern sales of engravings in this country would stand that of the Edwin Babcock Holden collection, sold by the American Art Association from April 21 to May 5, the catalogue comprising nearly eight thousand lots. A few books, mainly Americana of the Revolutionary period, were included.

The volume of "American Book-Prices Current" for the season of 1909-1910, whose publication has been delayed, but which will appear within a few days, will contain 16,994 records selected from about 124,000 lots described in 148 catalogues. Only 550 copies of the present volume have been printed, and it is expected to go out of print immediately after publication.

LUTHER S. LIVINGSTON.

"BAEDEKER"—HOW IT CAME TO BE A SYNONYM FOR GUIDE BOOK.

BAEDEKER—the guide book, not its creator—was born in 1828.

Its initial form was a quaint little volume about the Rhine.

"DOWN THE RHINE."
HISTORICAL, TOPOGRAPHICAL,
DESCRIPTIVE.
A HANDBOOK FOR HURRIED
TRAVELLERS.

So runs the translation of the title. A copy, worn with usage and yellowed by time, is treasured at the Baedeker publishing establishment in Leipzig, a great building in Nürnburgerstrasse. Well may it be venerated. That tiny book is the starting point of the firm's prosperity.

It was written by a learned German professor, one Johann Augustus Klein. The name of the publisher, Karl Baedeker, of Coblentz, does not even appear on the title-page.

This Karl Baedeker was a native of the Rhine Province by birth, and a publisher by predestination. For he was born, in 1801, in Essen-am-Ruhr, of a family that for generations had been engaged in the printing trade, at that time the aristocrat of industries, thanks to its Court and ecclesiastical privileges and the restrictions which safeguarded admission to the trade guild. He received a solid education, even attended the university, and served his practical apprenticeship in Heidelberg and Berlin. Then, at the age of twenty-six, he compiled with family traditions by founding a book shop and printing house at Coblentz, on the Rhine. There, the following year, he published Professor Klein's quaint old "Rhine Trip."

Modest to a supreme degree was this publisher of genius. Although before his death, in 1859, the "Baedeker" had firmly established its reputation and made his publishing house widely known, he was inclined to underestimate rather than overestimate its value as a branch of his business. Certainly he never foresaw that it would continue to develop importance and finally outlive all the other branches. He was so entirely free from vanity, so thoroughly honest and generous, that he always attributed frankly to another, to the London publisher Murray, the paternity of the idea which was destined to make the name of Baedeker world famous.

The motto, so to speak, of the "Baedeker" is independence and accuracy. It contains not a single advertisement. Thus the publisher, when making up the "Practical Notes" that preface the descriptions of towns, is not called upon to consider the susceptibilities of any tradesman in that town or out of it. The solicitude for accuracy is not less marked. Karl Baedeker was an indefatigable traveller, and made it his unvarying rule to gather on the spot all the practical information contained in the guide books.

This is still the system followed by the firm. The information is obtained at first hand and is checked in many ways; official publications are consulted, expert authorities are appealed to, the services of specialists are engaged. Even when all the material is in hand the work is far from finished. Everything has to be condensed. The entire mass of data is passed through a critical sieve to separate the gold from the dross. When the essentials only remain and one would suppose the text to be in its final form another checking process is gone through. Proof sheets of the respective sections are sent to the firm's representatives in the different localities. And these representatives make a concluding visit, proof sheets in hand, to the picture galleries, collections and places described, and indicate on the proofs any changes which may have been effected since the article was put into type.

The publishing of a "Baedeker" is a Sisyphean task. Scarcely is it ended when it begins again. Each guide book in the series is cast into the melting pot every three or four years and is thoroughly overhauled at more frequent intervals. During a recent visit to the publishing offices in Leipzig I saw a bundle of pages that had been "corrected" for a new edition, in preparation, of the "Northern Italy." There was scarcely a single line without some important alteration. That new edition will be a new work. I saw, also, the material which is being collected for a "Baedeker" to "India, Ceylon and the Far East." The idea of bringing out this guide book was suggested to Messrs. Baedeker by the steady increase which they noticed in the annual statistics of tourist travel to the Far East.

Naturally, the labor involved in this system is enormous and the outlay formidable. All the type is set by hand, there being such a variety of "founts" in a single sentence that the linotype or monotype would be useless.

The maps alone cost vast sums, and the work of bringing them up to date for each revision or new edition is a heavy source of expense. This work is done in the building where the Baedeker publishing offices are situated. But it is done by an independent firm, Wagner & Debes, after the Perthes firm, of Gotha, the most famous map engravers in the world. The engraving is done directly on the stone; thence the map is transferred to the lithographic stone. The result is far more satisfactory and artistic than could be obtained by the photographic reduction of big maps.

Lithographic stone of the requisite fineness of grain is found in its perfect state mainly in Germany. A slab big enough for only four or five very small maps costs $200. More than a thousand of these slabs engraved for the Baedeker guide books are stored in the basement of the publishing offices.

In another respect the system originated by the founder of "Baedeker" is still faithfully followed. This is the direct supervision by the Baedeker of the moment of every part of the firm's business. No decision regarding any detail may be taken by subordinates. The original Karl Baedeker did every thing himself. The present chief of the firm and his sons still do most of the work.

1910 A POOR YEAR FOR THE ENGLISH BOOKTRADE.

"However virtuously determined one may be to make the best of things," says a writer in the (English) Bookseller, "I am afraid that it will be impossible to provide a flattering epitaph for the year which is now passing away. From whatever point of view its retrospect may be approached, there is no avoiding the conclusion that 1910 has been a year in which adverse influences have predominated; and it will take its departure at midnight to-morrow to the accompaniment of a general sigh of relief. It has certainly left no store of grateful memories to those who are concerned with the production and distribution of books. Its two general elections have been quite enough of themselves to give it a place of sinister distinction in the records of bookmen and booksellers. But its tale of adversity by no means ends with the memory of its political distractions; for in early May, just when a publishing season which promised to be exceptionally fruitful and prosperous was getting into full swing, there fell upon the nation the calamity of the sudden death of the good, wise, and well-beloved King Edward. From the stagnation which attended the first months of mourning for that grievous event, it was hoped that there would be uninterrupted opportunity for recovery during the later part of the year; but, before the autumn publishing season had run its normal course, the second electoral avalanche within eleven months descended pitilessly upon us, and completed the misfortune of a year in which the fates have been persistently malign, and which will be 'rung out' with unqualified satisfaction.

"Still, in spite of its cruelly adverse conditions, we are entitled to say that 1910 has been, from the literary point of view, by no means lacking in interest and productiveness. Its dominant 'note' has been, without doubt, the ascendency of works of biography; and in that category it has given us at any rate two books of outstanding merit and importance—the first volume of Mr. Monypenny's 'Life of Disraeli,' a work which promises to do full personal and historical justice to its subject, and Lord Rosebery's singularly fine study of the earlier career of 'Chatham.' Besides these, we have had the admirable memoir of 'Lady John Russell,' for which her daughter Lady Agatha Russell and Desmond MacCarthy were jointly responsible. Sir Lewis Michell's 'Life of Cecil Rhodes,' and other works which have helped to give biography its place of deserved pre-eminence in the literary chronicle of the year.

"Books of personal reminiscence have, as usual, been well to the fore, though none of them has succeeded in rivalling the charm and interest of Lady Dorothy Nevill's second instalment of memories, 'Under Five Reigns;' and in the department of travel and sport we have had such notable works as Commander Peary's absorbing record of his Polar exploration, the irrepressible Mr. Roosevelt's 'African Game Trails,' and Sir Frederick Treves' 'Uganda for a Holiday.' For the novelists, it can hardly be said to have been a year of specially noteworthy achievement. That new star of the first magnitude whose rising has been so long awaited has once more failed to appear upon the horizon of English fiction; and though some of the established favorites have maintained their reputation—I do not know that any one of them can be held to have increased it—and there have been two or three able and promising newcomers, I do not think it is possible to say more, on the whole, than that our novelists have 'marked time' during the past twelvemonth. Without particularizing, we can claim, however, to have had a fair proportion of clever and acceptable novels, if no great ones, since the beginning of the year; while there has been, on the other hand, a marked and welcome diminution of the flood of sheer rubbish which was formerly poured upon us with reckless copiousness in the much-abused name of fiction. That, at least, is is a point to the credit of 'the year that's awa'.'

"Of the several reasons which have been assigned for the scant popularity of poetry by various correspondents of The Bookseller, I am inclined to think that the least convincing is that suggested by the complaint that the work of our modern bards is usually 'irrelevant to the present conditions of life.' . . . We may get a good supply of forceful and spirited verse dealing with aeroplanes, and motors, and wireless telegraphy, and to forth; as a matter of fact, we have had a fair amount of it already. But to imagine that such things as these are sufficient of themselves to inspire a great poet, in the sense that Shakespeare and Milton and Shelley and Tennyson were inspired, is surely to cherish the most melancholy of delusions."

BEST BOOKS OF 1909

The results of the general vote by librarians in this state and some others who had indicated their interest, as to the 50 books of 1909 (1909, not 1910) to be chosen first for a village library are given below, reprinted from New York Libraries.

THE GUESSING GAME.

WHEN the Christmas season is over and bookmen have time to compare notes and swap stories, there are told every year some new examples of knotty bibliographical problems that demanded immediate solution during the holiday rush in some busy shops.

[1]New edition.

A New York bookseller in the downtown district tells of two inquiries that exercised his guessing ability somewhat. One customer asked for a book called "In Tomb with an Infant." This was not so difficult to solve, since the inquirer was perfectly satisfied with a copy of Trine's "In Tune with the Infinite." Another rush inquiry was for a story called "Clear the Tracks," which the customer felt sure was by an author of the "same name as a Democrat who ran for President a few years ago." Having a fair knowledge of recent political history, the dealer turned to "Parker" in his catalogue, and hitting on the "Right of Way," he quickly made a sale and a satisfied customer.

THE ROMANCE OF BOOKSELLING.

TIME invests all great commercial undertakings with the halo of romance and the further we are removed from the genesis of the subject, the more wonderful do the beginnings and developments seem. In these days of series it is strange that enterprising publishers have not devoted more attention to the romance of trade. The business of the grocer has been well done, but many others would, in the hands of a competent historian, lead to informing and fascinating books. Advertising has already been treated by Henry Sampson, and a more entertaining volume it would be difficult to name. The history—or, as Mr. Mumby prefers to call it, the romance—of bookselling has frequently been attempted; but only once before has a writer essayed to cover the whole subject, and it must be admitted that that attempt—by Henry Curwen—was a failure, and a piece of hackwork unworthy of the subject.

It is difficult to draw lines between printing, publishing, and bookselling, and Mr. Mumby in his "Romance of Bookselling: a history from the earliest times to the 20th century," published in England by Chapman & Hall, gets out of it by grouping the three under the one heading. At one time the printer was also the publisher and the vendor of the books which he printed. For about a century, however, the three callings have been more or less distinct, and it is strange that Mr. Mumby should have devoted so much space in the latter part of his well-filled volume to what is neither printing nor bookselling, but publishing. In a word, his canvas is too crowded. Some of the periods into which his volume is divided have been more exhaustively dealt with in previous books, and others might with advantage have had more space devoted to them. But no book on bookselling could fail to be interesting; and in seeking to cover this vast subject from the earliest times to the present day, the author, if he has attempted what half-a-dozen specialists might shrink from undertaking, has at least written an admirable, and, on the whole, a trustworthy volume.

There are half-a-dozen phases of book-production which might fill as many volumes. There is, for instance, the "congeries" system which was so popular in the eighteenth century, when a number of publishers and booksellers had shares in the "undertaking" of many books, and therefore a real interest in pushing the sale of such books. "The Annual Register" is, we think, still published on this system, or was a few years ago. The subject is intricate; but Messrs. Longman's archives contain ample material for a valuable contribution to our knowledge of the statistical side of this phase of publishing, and Mr. Peet, who contributes a bibliography to this volume, could doubtless have provided an exhaustive analysis of these important documents.

We have before us the MS. inventory of the stock-in-trade of two eminent booksellers, Daniel Midwinter & Aaron Ward, taken on August 1, 1732, and extending to 35 pages quarto. From this document it appears that the value of the stock amounted to the large sum—for those days—of £7489 2s. 10d., of which, roughly, two-thirds belonged to Midwinter, and one-third to Ward; the signatures of both are attached to the document. Neither appears in Mr. Mumby's index, yet they were men of considerable importance, for, from a contemporary slip inserted in the MS. it appears that this firm spent £200 on "paper for Calmet," doubtless Calmet's "Dictionary of the Bible" with "occasional remarks" by John Colson and the Rev. Samuel D'Oyly; the cost of advertisements was one guinea only, whilst a Mr. Mynds is down for two payments of £15 10s. and £30 respectively. Who was Mr. Mynds? Some of the firm's shares in various books or "copies" are curious. They owned, for instance 1-16th of Busby's Greek Grammar, valued at a guinea; of Chambers's "Dictionary" their share was a 16th and a 64th, of the total value of £61 14s. 4d.; of the Delphin Virgil they owned 400 out of 3000 copies, value £25; their share in a "New Lattin Dictionary," a 40th, was valued at £63 16s.; and so forth. A few such documents as this stock-in-trade account, and others already printed by Nichols or D'Israeli elsewhere, would, if grouped and properly digested, prove of greater value in the real history, as distinct from the romance, of bookselling than the most extensive acquaintance with title-pages and imprints.

Mr. Mumby relegates to a foot-note one of the memorable events in the history of eighteenth-century publishing, the production of "Gulliver's Travels." He does not tell us of Swift's letter, dated August 8, 1726, to B. Motte, written in a feigned hand and signed "Richard Sympson," offering the MS. of this work for publication, and asking £200 for the copyright, with the request that it should be published before Christmas; nor does he tell us that at the expiration of six months Motte applied for a longer period of credit, or of the consequent interview between the publisher and "Richard Sympson" at the house of "Erasmus Lewis in Cork Street, behind Burlington House." Neither does Mr. Mumby tell us, what we believe to be a fact, concerning the house of Rivington at the sign of the Bible and Crown in Paternoster Row, that this firm used to put up their shutters on January 30, the date of King Charles I.'s execution. . . .

Bentley's trade sales at the Albion are said to have "survived until October 24, 1888" (p. 196); but the custom certainly did not die out on that occasion: the dinner was held for some years subsequently by Mr. Bentley, at the Hotel Metropole, we think. Mr. Mumby does not seem to know that Richard Bentley was the first eminent publisher who attempted to reduce the price of the old "three-decker novel," which survived until about 1894. . . .

The accounts of the existing publishing firms are necessarily brief, and capable of considerable extension. This is particularly the case with the house of Cassell. We are told of John Cassell's teas and coffees; we have before us one of his advertisement pamphlets of 1857, from which it is seen not only that his numerous periodicals and books were published for him by W. Kent & Co., of Paternoster Row, but also that, like Newbery in the previous century, he was connected with patent medicines, inasmuch as Baron Sonvillie's "Axtra Mankaz," which claimed to supersede cod-liver oil, and to be (among its many other virtues) an antidote to consumption, was to be had at the same address as "John Cassell's Coffee No. 1 (pink wrapper)" and the three other varieties, at 80, Fenchurch Street.

Of the two appendixes, the more important is W. H. Peet's "Bibliography of Publishing and Bookselling," which covers 40 pages, and is reprinted from Notes and Queries. This forms a valuable addition to the work, and is a feature which we should like to see elaborated and published in a separate form, like Bigmore and Wyman's "Bibliography of Printing." The "Bibliography" would, perhaps, be more accurately described as a contribution to the subject, for its omissions are many, and some of the entries are not sufficiently definite for reference. . . . There were six volumes published of The Bibliographer (Mr. Peet mentions only five), and the same number of its successor, Booklore (Mr. Peet says four), and these periodicals, with The Bookworm (7 volumes), which is not mentioned at all, contain a considerable amount of material bearing on the history of bookselling which the historian might well take into consideration. The same may be said of The Antiquary and Walford's Antiquarian. A list of the articles on bookselling in these periodicals would have added greatly to the value of the "Bibliography." The House of Bentley (p. 434) was the subject of a special article in The Times when that firm became merged into Macmillan's. . . . The firm of Mudie is not included here as a substantive entry. It has formed the subject of scores of articles, one of which (afterwards reprinted as a pamphlet) appeared in Good Words for October, 1894; it was written by W. C. Preston, and illustrated by F. G. Kitton and W. D. Almond. No reference is made to Robert Davies's scholarly "Memoir of the York Press," 1868, which contains much valuable information concerning bookselling and publishing in Yorkshire.—The Athenæum.

THE COUNTRY LIFE PRESS.

It is now nearly four months since Doubleday, Page & Company moved from their over-crowded New York establishment to their new home, "The Country Life Press," at Garden City, Long Island. On a plot of forty acres, with a half mile frontage on Franklin Avenue, the company erected in a surprisingly short period of time a commodious building nearly 400 feet long with wings 200 feet in depth, arranged to afford a garden court in the front of the building 120 feet by 200 feet, with two large fountains. The construction is of brick, concrete, steel and glass, and the plans called for both an abundance of light and air, combined with the greatest facility of operation. Both of these qualifications have been remarkably well met. About two-thirds of the side area is glass in steel window frames, and there is no place as much as forty feet from a window. Nothing has been omitted to help in obtaining the maximum degree of efficiency. On the ground floor the paper enters the building from the freight cars at the north end, and goes out to the cars as a finished product at the south end, in a straight line of manufacturing processes and on a single level. This entire lack of "unproductive labor" eliminates much expense, delay and spoilage that would be otherwise incurred.

The pressroom fills the left wing and the bookbindery department the right; while the shipping and mailing departments are in the center. The basement is used for stock room and storage.

On the floor above are located the offices of the firm, the editorial, subscription, advertising, accounting, art and other departments, as well as the large composing room and, in separate and roomy apartments, but opening into the main composing room, is the Lanston type-setting machinery (no linotypes are used), the electrotype foundry and a complete photo-engraving department. The latter is one of several new departments added in the endeavor to make the Press entirely self sustaining. In the center of the second floor at the head of the main stairway will be found the very handsome library done in Caen stone and red gum. The daily output from this building is now fifteen thousand magazines and five thousand bound books; and this product can be doubled by adding more machinery.

Though utility must be the main objective in a building for workers, the ingenuity of the architects, Messrs Kirby & Pettit, has produced for the Country Life Press a building of much attractiveness as well. The grounds are being developed as rapidly as Nature will allow. Vines have been planted to overrun the building, and the court already has its winter green of rhododendrons and other evergreens. This court will be a hardy garden the rest of the year, which will change in its bloom every three weeks from daffodils in April, reflected in the big rims at the edge of the fountains, to chrysanthemums in November. The remainder of the grounds include a remembrance garden for the trees and plants sent by distinguished friends, a rose garden, model vegetable gardens, and tennis courts and a baseball field. A greenhouse will be built next Spring. The further development of the grounds is receiving much careful study by the expert authorities on gardening and farming connected with the house.

Special provision has been made for the comfort and convenience of the six hundred present employees of the press and publishing house; and it is said that less than ten per cent were lost by the country removal. Lunch room facilities are provided, although many live in Hempstead, Garden City and other commuting suburbs near by. Doubleday, Page & Company are justly proud of their new quarters, which are in many respects a model; and are glad to welcome there their friends in the trade.

A HISTORY OF THE ISSUE OF FICTION IN ENGLAND.

In a recent number of The Publishers' Circular Joseph Shaylor gives an interesting summary of the history of fiction publication in Great Britain.

During the last quarter of a century, he says, many and varied have been the attempts to settle what form, size and price would be best suited to the issue of fiction, and what style of production would be most satisfactory to the author, the publisher and the reader.

In attempting a short survey of the novel it may be of interest to inquire in what form works of fiction were issued in the past. Formerly the number of volumes in which a novel was published varied for various reasons. Some of these related to its literary value; when a novel was of sufficient length, the number of volumes might be five, six or even ten. Several volumes were considered by the publishers of past days as the most fitting style in which to issue the work of a popular author. Fortunately there was then a public who appreciated and purchased them, and libraries in which they could be housed.

It is a recognized fact that nothing should be put into works of fiction and romance except that which relates to human nature; it was this axiom which guided ancient writers from the earliest ages downwards. The spirit of romance and fiction existed in the old Jewish and Babylonian literature; the writers of Greece and Rome were great story tellers. Much of the fiction which was written for pure amusement contains a large amount of human nature, and is traceable to the influence of Spanish, Italian and French literature; much of the robust fiction in the past centuries was largely due to the work of Boccaccio and Rabelais.

THE FIRST PROSE NOVEL.

In our own literature it appears probable that the weaving together of the Arthurian Legends by Sir Thomas Malory created the love of romance and the interest in human life and human character which became popular in the latter half of the fifteenth century. This was followed by a translation of Froissart's Chronicles, printed by Caxton's successor, Wynkyn de Worde, and contained the English prose specimens of the Charlemagne cycle of romances. Later on we have what has been called the first original prose novel written in English, John Lilly's "Euphues," which in style is supposed to have greatly influenced Shakespeare in describing some of his characters, and also to have set the fashion of novel writing.

In the Elizabethan age we have Sir Philip Sidney's "Arcadia," of which his friend and biographer, Lord Brooke, says: "The truth is, his end was not writing even while he wrote, but both his wit and understanding bent upon his heart to make himself and others, not in words or opinion, but in life and action, good and great.

NOVELS IN SEVERAL VOLUMES.

This period, however, was full of the drama of literature and action. Authorship was fashionable, and foundations were laid which bore much fruit down to the romances of the present day. Many of these old works were issued in 4to, and frequently in several volumes, and the form was well fitted to the age in which they were produced. The following list of works of fiction issued in different periods will illustrate this statement:

Cervantes' "Don Quixote." 2 vols. 4to.
Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe." 2 vols. 8vo.
Swift's "Gulliver's Travels." 2 vols. 8vo.
Fielding's "Tom Jones." 6 vols. 12mo.
Richardson's "Sir Charles Grandison." 7 vols. 8vo.
Sterne's "Tristram Shandy." 9 vols. 12mo.
Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield." 2 vols. 12mo.

Apparently, during the first half of the nineteenth century, the two or three volume form of issue became the general medium by which fiction was issued, and most of the novels by Ainsworth, Lever, Lytton and Scott were published in this form, while some of the novels by Dickens and Thackeray were issued in monthly parts as well as in volume form, and most authors of less importance adopted the three volume style of production. The reason for the adoption of this method of publication was largely due to the establishment of circulating libraries in this country, the supply to libraries being carried on in rather an exceptional but yet a very interesting manner. The libraries did not purchase the novels from the publishers, but from middlemen who were bookbinders, and much competition existed between these rival binders. The books were then issued by the publishers in sheets with a square label upon which was printed the title of the book and the volumes, and it was a race with these binders who could get the sheets earliest and deliver them quickest to the libraries. Upon the issue of an important novel the publisher would supply the binder with sheets soon after midnight upon the day of publication, when the binder would have the covers ready; he would fold the sheets, paste on the label, and deliver the work complete to the libraries by eight o'clock in the morning. This was considered a wonderful example of business despatch, but men and methods were different then and now.

MUDIE AND THE 3-VOLUME NOVEL.

This method of issuing novels to the libraries received a severe blow soon after the year 1842, the year Mudie's Library was established, Mr. Mudie conceiving the idea of buying the sheets of novels from the publishers and binding them himself. Later on the publishers bound the books themselves and supplied them to the libraries complete in cloth bindings. By these means the arrangements of the industrious binder, under the altered conditions, came to an end.

From the middle until nearly the end of the nineteenth century the three-volume novel held its position as the accepted vehicle for the issue of new fiction, and it is quite a question if many authors whose names are now well known would ever have secured the support of the public had it not been for this system of publishing.

There was then an arrangement between certain publishers and the libraries by which the latter bought at least a fixed number of every novel issued by them. This sale nearly covered the cost of production, and generally relieved the publisher from any possibility of loss. The publisher being thus largely secured, was more ready to speculate in the work of a new author than he is to-day. By the present form in which a novel is issued, the publisher must sell nearly ten times more to recoup his outlay than was necessary in the old three-volume novel.

END OF THE 3-VOLUME NOVEL.

The end of the nineteenth century was approaching when the three-volume novel ceased to exist. Its end was somewhat sudden, but murmurs against its right to live were heard from many quarters, while from others it was supposed that all possibilities of an unknown author being able to appeal to the reading public were at an end. Its execution , however, came through the action of the libraries, who, on June 27, 1894, issued the following circular to the publishers:

"For some time past we have noted with concern a great and increasing demand on the part of the Subscribers to our Library for Novels in Sets of Two and Three Volumes.

"To meet their requisitions, we are committed to an expenditure much out of proportion to the outlay on other kinds of literature.

"Most of the novels are ephemeral in their interest, and the few with an enduring character are published in cheap editions so soon after the first issue that the market we formerly had for the disposal of the surplus stocks in sets is almost lost.

"You may conceive that this state of matters very seriously reduces the commercial value of a Subscription Library. We are, therefore, compelled to consider what means can be taken to improve this branch of our business.

"As a result of our deliberations, we would submit for your favourable consideration:

"1. That after the 31st December next the price of novels in sets shall not be more than 4s. per volume, less the discount now given, and with the odd copy as before. You will please observe that the date we name for the alteration of terms is fixed at six months from the end of this current month, in order that your arrangements may not be affected by the suggested alteration.

"2. In respect to the issue of the cheaper editions, and the loss to us of our market for the sale of the best and earlier edition of novels and other works, through their publication in a cheaper form before we have had an opportunity of selling the surplus stock, we propose that you be so good as to undertake that no work appear in a cheaper form from the original price until twelve months after the date of its first publication."

The effect of this circular was slow at first, but the firm stand taken by Messrs. Mudie and W. H. Smith & Son eventually killed the old system of issuing novels. The end came in 1897, in which year only four novels in three-volume form were published, and the 6s. novel became an established fact. It may be interesting to have a record of the issue of three-volume novels for fourteen years prior to its extinction, that is, from 1884 to 1897:

1884	there	were	published	193
1885	"	"	"	193
1886	"	"	"	184
1887	"	"	"	184

Many attempts have since been made to revive the issue of novels in some form other than the one-volume. The most recent is the experiment with Mr. De Morgan's "It Never Can Happen Again," and although this can scarcely be considered a failure, yet it certainly was not a great success, as the circulating libraries are undoubtedly against any attempt to revive the old system.

HAS THE 6S. NOVEL COME TO STAY?

The question is often asked, "Has the one-volume 6s. novel come to stay?" This question can only be answered by appealing to the various interests vested in its production. The reply, therefore, is that for the author, publisher, whosesale distributor and the bookseller at a less price than 6s., and without a very large sale, there is no adequate remuneration for the labor expended in production and distribution. Whether or not the various cheap issues will eventually displace the 6s. novel remains at present an unsolved problem, but it would appear that these issues are more suited as a medium for the publication of books which have appeared in a more expensive form. Besides this, these cheap editions appeal to a new and less discriminating public.

It would be folly to attempt the issue of fiction in opposition to the requirements of the public. Unfortunately, this is an age of cheapness. Education has been given to the people, and the better the literature placed in their hands the better it will be for the nation generally, and however much we may lament the issue or reissue of cheap fiction, it has undoubtedly come to stay. But we can congratulate ourselves that the literary tone of books was never higher than it is to-day. It is, however, to be desired that when the present hunger for new excitements and luxuries of all kinds has passed, attention will be given again to the production of novels in a form which would be a credit to all concerned in their making.

Why should we not have fiction written from a still higher literary standpoint, as well as written to amuse. The former might be produced with good illustrations in one, three, or ten-volume forms, while the latter could remain in its present ephemeral condition. This hope may be Utopian, but there is much of to-day's fiction which should be issued in a more expensive form, and for which the author should receive larger royalties, the publisher and distributor much larger profits, and which deserves production in a more permanent form than the ordinary one-volume novel.

DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS SHOT.

DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS, the novelist, was shot four times Monday afternoon in East 21st Street, New York City, by Fitzhugh C. Goldsborough, a musician, formerly of Washington, who afterwards killed himself. Mr. Phillips was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where he was immediately operated upon.

Mr. Phillips rallied from the operation and for some hours his physicians and friends had hopes of his recovery, but towards evening on Tuesday hemorrhages set in, and at 11 P.M. he died, conscious almost to the end.

Mr. Phillips was coming from the National Arts Club, across Gramercy Park, on his way to the Princeton Club. On the sidewalk he was met by his assailant, who flung up a magazine gun and fired five shots in rapid succession, four of them taking effect.

Mr. Phillips, who started his career as a newspaper man in 1887, was born in Madison, Ind., on October 31, 1867. His father was David G. Phillips. The author was graduated from Princeton in 1887. Since his first book, "The Great God Success," which appeared in 1901, he has written nearly a score of volumes and magazine articles dealing with modern social and industrial conditions in novel form. Among the best known are "Her Serene Highness," "A Woman Ventures," "Golden Fleece," "The Master Rogue," "The Cost," "The Plum Tree," "The Social Secretary," "The Deluge," "The Reign of Guilt," "The Fortune Hunter," "The Second Generation," "Old Wives for New," "The Fashionable Adventures of Joshua Craig," "The Hungry Heart," and "The Husband's Story," his latest novel published late last year. His stories deal chiefly with social and political conditions, and show American men and women drawn by one who has studied them carefully. His assassin seems to have been insane.

It is an interesting coincidence that in the February Bookman, published almost upon the day he died, there is an article on Phillips by Frederick Tabor Cooper, one of the series on "American Storytellers" which has been running in the Bookman for some time.

COMMUNICATIONS.

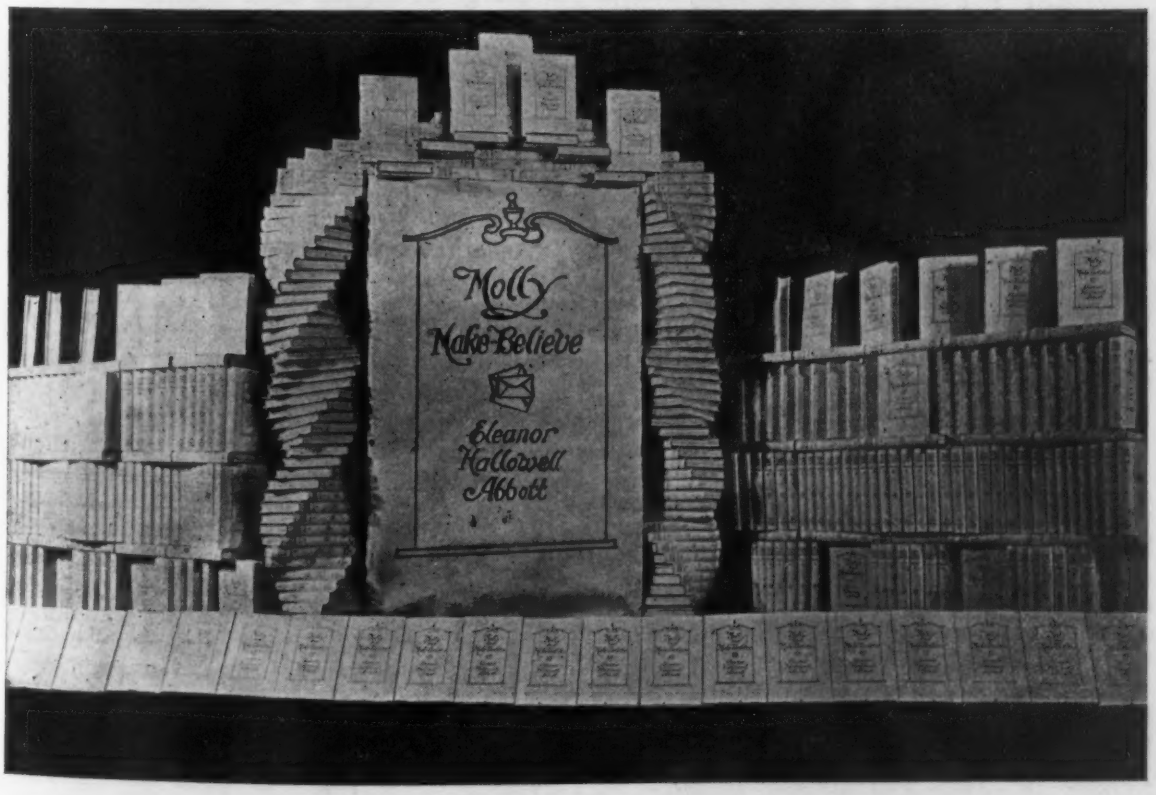

"POSTAGE EXTRA."

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 14, 1911.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

I ADVERTISE from time to time in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY under the head "Books Wanted," and about two-thirds of those who reply are kind enough to give price and postage on books I call for. The other third give price and add "postage extra," requiring me to spend my time and postage as well as theirs to find out how much I must send for the book to be mailed me. I suppose other dealers have same trouble as I have. Is there any reason for this? It is very annoying when in a hurry for a book to get an answer from San Francisco or London, or distant points, with words "postage extra," and have to write and wait for an answer the second time before ordering. Why not give the postage at first and save trouble? Why not?

OBITUARY NOTES.

FREDERICK J. SPEAKER.

FREDERICK J. SPEAKER, who was killed in the New York Central wreck at Batavia on the morning of Friday, the 13th, had just entered the employ of the Dodge Publishing Company on January 1. He was twenty-six at the time of his death, and for eleven years had been with A. C. McClurg & Co., where he rose from the position of office boy to that of their Nebraska representative, with headquarters in Omaha. His Omaha salesroom was one of the most successful and attractive of the many maintained by that firm. Mr. Speaker's mother was left a widow with six children when he was twelve years old. Fred was the oldest, and all his energies were devoted to making her life comfortable and to the education and advancement of his brothers and sisters. As a young boy he was frail, but he worked at all hours to be of help. Morning and night he worked in a drug store, studying meanwhile until he received his certificate of a registered pharmacist. He was also a graduate of the Sheldon School of Salesmanship. On Sundays he did other work, and early or late was always willing to do anything to help his family. Fred was a friend to be valued, and in Chicago, in Nebraska, and particularly among the representatives of other publishing houses who came to Omaha he will be sorely missed. His life is an example of how much can be accomplished by "filling each unforgiving minute with sixty seconds' worth of distance run."

DR. CHARLES EDWARD CLARK, a retired physician of Lynn, Mass., and prominent in literary and yachting circles, dropped dead at the home of his wife's parents in Passaic, N. J., January 20. He was about sixty years old. He was a member of the Grolier Club, of New York, and the Oxford Club, of Lynn. He has been a great collector of books, and has left a large library of rare books. He also possessed probably the largest collection of book plates in the country. He leaves a widow.

MRS. GEORGE J. MCLEOD, wife of George J. McLeod, of McLeod & Allen, Toronto, died at the Hotel Imperial, New York City, on Tuesday morning last, January 24. During her visit to New York with her husband she was stricken with an attack of pneumonia which, failing to respond to the most careful treatment, caused her lamented death after a brief illness.

A. J. OCHS, a well-known Boston bookseller, was run over and killed by a team on Boylston Street, Boston, Monday evening, January 23. He was for a great many years in charge of the old book department of the DeWolfe Fiske Co., and later on for himself on Cornhill and Columbus Avenue. He leaves a widow and one son.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

THE name of the Busy Man's Magazine, Toronto, will be changed to McLean's Magazine. The publisher's announcement says: "People have thought that Busy Man's meant Business Man's. The magazine is a general one."

ALFRED BURTON, art editor of the Pictorial Review, has resigned that office. Mr. Burton is well-known in the art world, and his work on the Woman's Home Companion, Circle Magazine, and Pictorial Review, has attracted much attention. Mr. Burton was one of the first art editors to embellish the half-tone illustrations with frames and scroll work; also to introduce lettered headings for articles.

WE are in receipt of the holiday announcement number of The Item, a monthly house organ and trade journal of the book and stationery trades of the Philippine Islands, published by E. C. McCullough & Co., of Manila, P. I. It is an attractive quarto, containing besides several pages of book notices and general news (including automobiles, player-pianos, etc.) a check list of recent publications, with prices in Philippine currency. Evidently the American novel has the same popular appeal there as here.

THE new magazine for people who are interested in printing, the Graphic Arts, one of the trio to be published by the National Arts Publishing Company of Boston, makes a fine impression with its opening January number. The colored frontispiece, by a new process, is a work of art, and the other pictures and the typography are remarkably good. H. P. Porter leads with an article on the latest developments of printing; H. L. Bullen begins a series on types with the serif, and H. L. Johnson writes on city buildings for printers. There are papers on hand feeding, on the advantages of quality and on printing in the public schools. H. L. Koopman shows very interestingly the value of reviewing writing after it has been set up in type..

PERSONAL NOTES.

ALFRED R. MCINTYRE, connected with the publishing and manufacturing departments of Little, Brown & Co., Boston, has been admitted to the firm.

LEWIS B. WESTBROOK, formerly with the Presbyterian Board of Publication, will shortly leave Philadelphia to take a position as salesman with the Dodge Publishing Company.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE CASSELL CO. have taken over from the Macmillan Company and Harper Bros. the American rights in all the novels of Warwick Deeping.

T. Y. CROWELL & COMPANY published sixty-five books in 1910, all specimens of the dainty manufacture for which this house is distinguished.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the incorporation of a gigantic new Canadian paper company. The Quebec Pulp and Paper Company of Montreal, capital $15,000,000.

HENRY BRYAN BINNS, well known as the author of important biographies of Lincoln and Whitman, has written a drama entitled "The Adventure." This is to be produced in London at an early date. It will be published on February 15, in London by A. C. Fifield, and in New York by B. W. Huebsch.

DR. WILLIAM EDGAR GEIL, whose study of the "Great Wall of China" was embodied in book form a year ago, has extended his research to the "Capitals of China," and a descriptive volume bearing this title and fully illustrated is to be brought out by the Lippincott Co. early in the spring.

MRS. MARY ROBERT COOLIDGE'S comprehensive book on "Chinese Immigration" (Holt) is already going to press for its second time. The attempts to exclude the Chinese have considerable analogy with those to exclude the Japanese, which probably is one of the reasons for the very considerable interest in this work.

LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD CO. brought out twenty-five juveniles during the season, all of pronounced merit; and their novels, "The Little Knight of X Bar B," by Mary K. Maule; "The Arch-Satirist," by Francis de Welfe Fenwick; and "The Castle Builders," by Charles Clark Munn, were all talked about.

MOFFAT, YARD & COMPANY have a book sure to meet with much criticism for many different reasons in Kauffman's "The House of Bondage," picturing New York's East Side tenement life with the touch of a Zola, but those who know have pronounced it true, and calculated to have needed influence in reforming the conditions described.

MESSRS. LONGMAN have in the press "The Evolution of Sea Power," by P. A. Silburn. His object is to examine the growth of sea power from the time of the Phœnicians up to the maritime nations of the present day, placing in relief the part it has taken in the delimitation of territory and the rise of various races.

REILLY & BRITTON have books specially adapted for gifts at "graduation" time in "School-Girl Days," "School-Fellow Days," "My Sorority," a record book for girls who belong to Greek letter or other societies; "My Fraternity" and "My Alma Mater," a companion to "The Girl Graduate," which has been so very popular.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY made special successes during the year of Wilfred T. Grenfell's "Down to the Sea;" Hugh Black's "Comfort," the third volume of the famous "Gift Trio;" Harold Begbie's "Twice-Born Men," dedicated to William James, who was proud of the dedication; and William George Jordan's "Little Problems of Married Life."

"THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF HENRY M. STANLEY," recently published in this country by Houghton Mifflin Co., seems destined to have a world-wide reading. It is now published in Italian under the title "Come Divenne Esploratore," and a German translation is just coming out. A French version will be ready next April and a Dutch translation is in preparation.

DANA ESTES & COMPANY brought out a beautiful de luxe edition of "The Poems of Christina Rossetti," fully illustrated with black and white drawings on every page and fifty-six illustrations in color by Florence Harrison, easily good for popularity during many coming gift seasons. They also added sets of several popular authors to their New Imperial Library of Standard Sets.

SMALL, MAYNARD & COMPANY are starting the year with four novels that promise to be successes: "One Way Out," the story of a middle-class New Englander much talked of while running in the Saturday Evening Post; "The Ghost, a Modern Phantasy," by Arnold

Bennett, now at the heighth of popularity; "A Prince of Romance," by Stephen Chalmers; and "Captivating Mary Carstairs," by Henry Second.

THE heroine of George Gibbs's forthcoming novel, "The Bolted Door," is a hothouse plant, a spoiled beauty of New York society. The man is an engineer and inventor, who has worked his way up through the shops of a great railroad. The girl's uncle leaves an eccentric will, by which she is compelled to marry this man or go penniless. D. Appleton & Company will publish Mr. Gibbs's novel at the end of this month.

"JOHN THE UNAFRAID," a little book issued some months ago by A. C. McClurg & Company from the pen of an anoymous author, who, it is said by the publishers, is a man who is well known over the length and breadth of the land and who has attained high political honors, has been so enthusiastically received that a third large edition has been found necessary. This new edition is now on the press and will be ready within a few weeks.

HELEN R. MARTIN'S "The Crossways," published in February, 1910, is in its sixth edition, and "Tillie: a Mennonite Maid," her earlier success, has been printed twelve times. Mrs. Martin's new novel, "When Half-gods Go," has departed entirely from the field of her earlier successes, that of Pennsylvania Dutch life. It is a drama of two men and two women, each fighting for right and happiness as he or she understands them.

THE London Nation selects from fiction publications of 1910 fifteen works which it considers notable. Among these only six were published in America—"A Motley," by John Galsworthy; "Tales of Men and Ghosts," by Edith Wharton; "The Finer Grain," by Henry James; "Celt and Saxon," by George Meredith; "Clayhanger," by Arnold Bennett; "An Affair of Dishonour," by William De Morgan. Of these the first four were published by Charles Scribner's Sons, of New York.

"BEN-HUR" seems to have achieved perennial life on the stage as well as between covers. The book is in steady demand, and its sales each year, the Harpers believe, would indicate very closely the number of new readers added to the adult fiction public. "Ben-Hur" as a play has long been familiar on the American stage. Within a week J. C. Williamson has arranged with Harper & Brothers and Klaw & Erlanger for a revival of "Ben-Hur" in Australia.

AFTER reporting the London divorce court for the London Daily Telegraph for a generation, Henry E. Fenn has written a book on the subject, called "Thirty-five Years in the Divorce Court." Some of the most famous divorce cases of the past generation came under his observation, and both lawyers and laymen will find his comments most illuminating. He gives character sketches of many of the foremost English lawyers, and the book, which is published in this country by Little, Brown & Co., is replete with anecdotes.

ELLEN CHASE'S "The Beginning of the American Revolution" is just issued by the Baker & Taylor Company. This is a work in three volumes based on contemporary letters, diaries and other documents, and chiefly concerned with Boston and its vicinity. The history begins with the various causes of discontent from the time of Governor Andros, and continues with a wealth of interesting and valuable detail through General Gage's proclamation of June 12, 1775. The illustrations, which are many, are mainly from contemporary portraits.

L. C. PAGE & COMPANY announce for publication to-day their first important book of the year, Charles Livingston Bull's "Under the Roof of the Jungle. After many months spent in the forest and swamps of British Guiana, he gives us a book of the life in the wild and beautiful jungle regions. He tells of the bright mornings, the suffocating noons, the long, lazy afternoons and the quiet, calm tropical nights of the great jungles and of the animals which inhabit them. A fascinating book with splendid drawings of animal life done on the spot by the author.

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY have ready a new story by Gaston Leroux, "The Phantom of the Opera," which, like his "Mystery of the Yellow Room" and "The Perfume of the Lady in Black," is a mystery tale of intricate plot. The scene is laid in the Paris Opera House, where secret chambers, unexplained deaths and disappearances, a human monstrosity and other shivery things are encountered by the actors in this tale of thirty or forty years ago. The illustrations, in color, are from oil paintings by André Castaigne.

"THE BOOK OF CARLOTTA" is the new title which has been given to Arnold Bennett's "Sacred and Profane Love," published in England four years ago, and to be published in this country next month by George H. Doran Co. It is a story of an English woman, "a brilliant, brutal book," according to the Daily Chronicle, "which will invite lovers of the erotic in literature and in life, and hit them a blow in the face." There will be a new preface, a study of the book, by Mr. Bennett. There will also be a new book by J. J. Bell, author of "Wee Macgregor," and "The Girl from Nowhere," by Mrs. Baillie-Reynolds.

"THE RETURN," by Walter De La Mare, will be published early this year by the Putnams. This eerie novel invites comparison with the tales of Poe and Hawthorne, and with "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." It is the story of the possession of a commonplace, easy-going man (a convalescent from influenza) by the furtive, restless spirit of a French suicide, a sort of low conjurer and adventurer dead several centuries. The sensations through which the possessed passes before the final expulsion of the intruding spirit are graphically depicted. It is a novel which should appeal strongly to this age so interested in psychic research.

"The Fate of Henry of Navarre," by John Bloundelle Burton, with numerous illustrations, including a map of the city, 1610, is published this week by John Lane Company. The author relates the true history of the murder of Henri Quatre, which has never before been told in the literature of this country, and only hinted at, though broadly so, in France. He shows that while the actual deed was being perpetrated by Ravaillac, other assassins were waiting in the immediate neighborhood to commit it. He also shows that the female sex played a strong part in the attempts on the most popular king, that has ever before, or ever since, sat upon the throne of France.

Full recognition of the feat of Captain Robert E. Peary in discovering the north pole, the thanks of Congress, and his retirement with the rank and pay of an admiral were recommended to the House by the Committee on Naval Affairs last Saturday. This body based its decision on the chart recently prepared by Hugh C. Mitchell and C. R. Duvall, of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, after they had gone over Captain Peary's notes of observations and his instruments. These experts, working separately and by different methods, had reached the same conclusion that the explorer, because of an error in his instruments, had gone to the left of the pole and past it, but that in doubling back and crossing over he had come within 1.6 miles of the exact spot. Mr. Bates, in the main report, made the point that Captain Peary was acting under orders from the Navy Department when he made the polar dash.

The Oxford University Press will celebrate the tercentenary of the Authorized Version of the Holy Bible by issuing shortly a photographic reproduction, 11¾ inches by 8¼ inches, of the black letter edition of 1611. Alfred W. Pollard has written a bibliographical introduction, in which he describes, first, the earlier English translations, 1380-1582 (the Wyclifite Bible, Tyndale's New Testament, Coverdale's Bible, Matthew's Bible, the Great Bibles, the Geneva Bible, the Bishops' Bible, the Rheims New Testament); secondly, the Bible of 1611 itself, giving a list of the revisers and the rules by which they were bound; and thirdly, the later history of this Bible. The volume will contain "The Translators to the Reader," various illustrative documents, and, of course, the Apocrypha. Henry Frowde also announces a cheaper reprint in Roman type, page for page, of the editio princeps, similar to that published by the Oxford University Press in 1833, the extraordinary accuracy of which, Mr. Pollard says, has been everywhere acknowledged. This volume will be 8 inches by 5½ inches, and will also contain Mr. Pollard's introduction.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTES.

The bibliographer's task, like that of the lexicographer, the index-maker, the compiler of almanacs, and many another fashioner of the tools used by other workers in literature or science, is a rather cheerless one. A consciousness of duty performed must often be the chief if not the only reward. In turning the leaves of the latest issue of "The Bulletin of the Bibliographical Society of America," which contains an appended list of "American Bibliographical Publications" and one of "Bibliographies of Bibliographies," one cannot but admire the zeal and self-devotion displayed in the compilation of many of the learned but very restrictedly useful works there mentioned. For example, what return in fame or fortune can be hoped for by the author of a bibliography of writings on paraphysis and hypophysis in the brain of the alligator, or by the enthusiastic aurist who has laboriously compiled a "partial bibliography of recent papers relating to the Eustachian tube?" A little better chance for popular recognition seems probable in the case of another bibliographer who has interested himself in the literature relating to "meals for school children" and has drawn up a list of references. And when we come to the subject of aëronautics we find ourselves in a domain comparatively rich in appeal to the average reader. A "Bibliography of Aëronautics," from the pen of P. Brockett, and published by the Smithsonian Institution, is described as reaching to the rather surprising length of nine hundred and fifty-four pages. But not one of these special bibliographical lists can be compared in dryness and technicality with the bibliographies of bibliographies, twenty-five of which are named in the "Bulletin." Especially admirable in these respects is M. Léon Vallée's "Bibliographie des Bibliographies," containing, with its supplement, more than eleven hundred pages. Another monumental work in the same department is the great "Bibliographie palégraphico-diplomatico-bibliographique générale," in two volumes, by P. Namur, published at Liége in 1838. In good truth, there seems to be no sort of book, however remote from ordinary human interests, that cannot be written if one will but follow Johnson's example in the making of his dictionary, and set one's self doggedly to it. Nevertheless, it is not likely that bibliography will ever be one of the crowded professions.—The Dial.

THE TRADITIONAL SIX.

THE HALLOWED WAYS OF BREAKING INTO THE MODERN NOVEL.

A CAREFUL study of contemporary fiction has revealed to me the fact that there are six recognized methods of opening. The six are these:

1. The modern society opening.

2. The John Driveller, or testamentary, opening.
3. The local color opening.
4. The detective opening.
5. The peaceful country house opening.
6. The spirited, or gadzooks, opening.

To make my meaning clear I will give a short instance of each style.

The Modern Society Opening:

"Certainly not," she said, putting up her sunshade with an air of decision. "Home, John."

And before I could say a word that ass, John, had started his horses and I was left on the pavement alone. The people all seemed to be staring and sniggering, so I hailed a passing taxi and went to the club to think it over.

You see, Cynthia and I had been more or less engaged for a year, only she called it "an understanding," and said I wasn't to tell anybody until I was making at least £200 a year at the bar, which seems rot when a fellow's got £2000 a year anyway.

However, one can't argue with Cynthia, because she simply smiles, and then a dimple comes, and you're done.

And as for arguing with Cynthia's mother, Lady Crowborough, I would as soon argue with the Sphinx or play a concertina in Bond Street.

Still, to snap out "Certainly not" seems a bit rough, when all I'd said was—etc.

The John Driveller, or Testamentary, Opening:

I, John Driveller, of St. Mary Piplington, in the County of Devon, yeoman, being now in my 82d year, would fain make clear, while yet there is time, those strange events which befell me in the days when George was King.

I have little skill in the use of words, and my hands are more accustomed to the sword than the pen, but if you would have a plain story of stirring deeds and of the love of a lad for a lass. . . .

And here my dear wife looks over my shoulder and playfully says she must help me when I come to speak of these matters—matters in which she played so brave a part. . . . 'Tis hard to realize that sixty years have passed since first we met. It seems but yesterday, and yet to-day our grandchildren are swarming like bees in the orchard. Strange, strange!

Well, you must know I was born—etc.

The Local Color Opening:

Market Day in Mudford:

A steady downpour of rain had given the high street an appearance highly suggestive of the propriety of the name of Mudford. A rain that made every one miserable except the landlord of the Green Pig, who did a thriving trade in hot rum.

Among the crowd of farmers and drovers in the bar parlor sat a man of a different stamp. A refined, intellectual man in well-fitting clothes of another cut than Mudford's. Mr. Claude de Crespigny, the new tenant of Mudford Hall—etc.

The Detective Opening:

My friend, Mr. Henry Trapper, the world-famous detective, leaned back in his armchair and puffed luxuriously at his disreputable play pipe.

I put another lump of coal on the fire and said cheerfully: "It's not a fit night for even a dog to be out."

"Nevertheless," he replied, "a dog is out, and, if I mistake not, is on his way here even now. A sad dog, with red hair and a smell of whiskey"——

"Trapper!" I said involuntarily, "this is really too much. You are making fun of me! How on earth can you know"——

"That he comes from Putney to tell us about the mysterious murder of a middle-aged Anglo-Indian colonel at the remote village of Slushington? Tut, tut, my dear fellow, the thing is simplicity itself. . . . But here comes Mr. Jenkins. Let him tell his own story."

The door opened and a wet, dishevelled creature, with red hair and a strong smell of whiskey, entered the room——etc.

The Peaceful Country House Opening:

The old flagged terrace at Rowlands Towers was bathed in the warm sun of a glorious afternoon in the late September. Nothing stirred in the shimmering heat save a big St. Bernard, who snapped lazily and with a resentful grunt at a passing fly.

To the left lay the orchards, their fruit trees bowed down with a generous harvest. To the right the kitchen gardens, flanked by the tall sheltering wall of the stables. Between them trim, sloping lawns and quaintly slipped yews stretched away in the distance to the banks of the river, and far beyond rose the line of the hills.

In a hammock by the river's bank lay a slim young girl with a book. The sun, filtering through the branches of the beech touched her hair with a soft caress—etc.

The Spirited, or Gadzooks, Opening:

"Marked cards!"

The cry rang through the crowded room and was succeeded by a silence so still that one could have heard the proverbial pin fall.

Instead there fell the hand of my Lord Rochester—across the mouth of the Marquis de Chateauneuf du Pape. In an instant swords were out and a scene of indescribable confusion ensued. Chairs were overturned and cards and dice trodden under foot as the fashionable throng of gamblers pressed forward to get a glimpse of the combatants.

My Lord Rochester was seemingly the coolest man in the room. With a careless smile and an easy grace he took off his pale blue satin coat, flicked a speck of dust from the long lace ruffles which hung over his wrists, felt the temper of his blade, and, bowing courteously to his enemy, "A votre service, Monsieur le Marquis," he said.

Now the Marquis de Chateauneuf du Pape was notoriously the best sword that had come out of France these many years—etc.

I write neither in sorrow nor in anger, much less in sarcasm, a vile habit of which I am incapable. They all seem to me very good openings, and if I could I would write, quite cheerfully, long and successful stories in all the six styles.

As that is beyond me, I can only call your attention to the phenomena and perhaps—who knows?—guide the steps of the novice into the way of gold.—Westminster Gazette.

BOOKS WANTED

Under this head booktrade subscribers, under their own names, are given five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertisement for books out of print in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding 100 lines a year. If over five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line. Books not out of print, repeated matter, and all advertisements from nonsubscribers cost 10 cents a line. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY, does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withdrawing their use from irresponsible advertisers, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

39 Facsimile Etchings, by "Phiz," Leach and Buss, sent by those artists in competition for designs to illustrate "Pickwick Papers." Some of these were accepted and others rejected. Many have Ms. annotations by Dickens in the margin, suggesting alterations. The Series is carefully mounted on sunk mounts and is contained in a half morocco portfolio. Descriptions are affixed to each plate. $20. This collection came from the library of J. Grego and is unique.

40 Original Drawings in Sepia, illustrative of some old London Houses (many of which are not now in existence) relating to Dickens, by Kornman. The description of each drawing is written on the back by the artist. Folio, no wrapper. $30. Very interesting to a Dickens collector.

The Library Dickens

THE WORKS OF CHARLES DICKENS

COMPLETE IN THIRTY VOLUMES

12mo. Uniform in size with the Centenary Edition of Balzac. Clearly and legibly printed from entirely new type upon superior paper, and illustrated with nearly five hundred full-page illustrations, engraved on wood, from original drawings by "Phiz," F. Barnard, and other English artists, together with portraits, frontispieces, and facsimiles of the original title pages in photogravure. Strongly bound in dark green cloth, gilt top.

The set in cloth, $30.00 net. Any story sold separately in cloth at $1.00 net per volume.

A Special Feature of THE LIBRARY DICKENS that makes it the most serviceable edition

Recognizing the severe use to which an edition of the most famous English novelist is necessarily subjected, a special reinforced library binding, with double lined backs, has been substituted for the ordinary cloth covers. No other edition is so bound or will stand the wear and tear which can be given to THE LIBRARY DICKENS.

We want The Trade to know that

KAUFFMAN'S

The HOUSE of BONDAGE

is here to stay. No flash in the pan novel, this. It has only creditably begun a long and growing career. Note these comments:

REV. ALEXANDER IRVINE:

"If 'The House of Bondage' could be put in the hands of the young men of the cities it would do more for purity than all the churches in America."

THOMAS ROWLAND in "COLLIERS":

"The book itself we are moved to recommend to the reading of every man and woman and boy, and especially of every girl, in these United States."

J. B. KERFOOT in "LIFE":

"In short, it lifts the lid from the covered mouth of the pit and bids those who are in earnest look down on that above which they stand. It may be added for the comforting of the tender-minded, that as this book is no poet's vision of the inferno, and no self-seeker's exploiting of the allures of vice, but a first-hand glimpse of a hell that has no glamours at close quarters, the conventional question or 'morality' does not enter into its consideration. It is not addressed to the young or to the squeamish."

NOTE:—But don't recommend this indiscriminately and don't offer it to young folks who have mothers and fathers. Offer it to the mothers and fathers. Let them take the responsibility of giving it to their own youngsters.

The Rainy Day Scrap Book

By E. L. and E. T. SHUMAN. Tall 8vo, cloth, decorated: List $1.25.

The Christian Advocate says: "At last there is something new for the instruction and delight of children. It is THE RAINY DAY SCRAP BOOK. It consists of 107 beautiful half-tone pictures which accompany the book and which are to be fitted into their appropriate places in the scrap book according to the hints given by outline sketches and brief descriptions. The book has all the novelty and fascination of a puzzle, all the delight and attraction of a game, all the profit and pleasure of an education in art, geography, natural science and biography. Mothers, teachers and children alike will have occasion to bless the happy ingenuity which made such a publication possible. The publishers have given it a rich but useful setting."

This novelty was a hit wherever shown. Two large editions sold during the fall.

The translation of the great French masterpiece, which has been called "The Epic of the Human Soul's Search for Truth," was recently discovered among Lafcadio Hearn's posthumous papers.

A MAN OF TWO COUNTRIES. By Alice Harriman. Striking four-color wrapper. $1.50 postpaid. Why does an Englishman ever become a naturalized American? (This story of Montana and of politics tells why Philip Danvers did.)

"Danvers, a reserved, insular young Englishman, is a new character in fiction as he gradually evolves into a naturalized American."—Seattle Times.

"Incident and movement are everywhere present, and the delineations of pioneer character have value."—Boston Transcript.

MRS. FEATHERWEIGHT'S MUSICAL MOMENTS. By John Brady. Profusely illustrated by the author. 75 cts. net; postage 10 cts. A laugh in every line and every picture. Unconscious humor and egotistical ignorance make Mrs. Featherweight a well-defined character. We all know her. Mr. Brady's numerous sketches are clever to the point of genius.

AN ATHABASCAN PRINCESS. By George Fenwick. Illustrated by Max W. Kollm. $1.35 net; postage, 12 cts. A story in verse.

PAPER TESTING

WE have facilities for making chemical, microscopical and physical tests of paper promptly and at reasonable prices.

We can be of service to the purchaser by showing him whether he is getting what he has specified.

We can be of service to the manufacturer in disputes where the report of a third party is likely to be more effective.
